Greeks and Italians in Action along 100-Mile Front

Heavy Fighting Centers In Telepini and Klisura And in the North Sector

Italian Infantry Well Supported by Artillery and Planes, but Fails To Repel Greeks

PREDICTS JAP ATTACK

William R. Castle

BITOLJ, Yugoslavia, Jan. 27 (AP)—Fighting along the entire 100-mile Greek-Italian front in Albania had mounted in intensity, reports received at the Yugoslav border said tonight.

Heaviest fighting was centered in Telepini and Klisura sectors where the Italians pounded the Greek lines in mass attack yesterday with fresh units of mountain Alpine taking part. Observers of the Italian infantry was supported by a continuous artillery and bombardment.

The Greek forces stubbornly repelled the Italian thrusts, the reports said, and this afternoon began the second round of counter-attacks. The Greeks apparently were challenging their foe in the air for a number of air fights were reported on the front.

On the southern front, where the Greek left wing has an anchor on the coast, the Greek forces were reported to be near Dukato, twenty miles from the port of Valona. However, they were only twelve miles from the southern shore of Ona Bay.

On the northern front the Greeks are reported to have made a strong attack today between Malina and Sandiste, claiming occupation of mountain peaks of strategic importance.

Talks with Churchill, Bevin and Other British Leaders

ATHENS, Jan. 27 (AP)—Reinforced Italian infantrymen fighting north of Klisura, Albania, counter-attacked with the aid of tanks, but were thrown back with severe losses, a Greek government spokesman said tonight.

The spokesman, who said repeated Fascist attacks were aimed at winning strategic heights.

Our army again gained ground, pushing up the terrain where the Italians left many dead and wounded, and taking 147 prisoners.

Constant hammering by the Greeks in below-zero temperatures and heavy snows was said to have taken an "enormous" toll of Italian troops.

Counter-attacks, sources here said, failed signally to stop the Greek advances.

Large numbers of casualties have been left by the Italians on the battlefield after each foray. Wounded from the front lines, Greek troops were reported to be capturing between 100 and 200 men a day.

The Italian forces were said to be being augmented recently by troops who were ferried across the Adriatic by planes.

At Rome, the Italian high command reported "growing" patrolling and local action in Albania, and planes bombed Greek positions, it said.

Hearst's Multi-Million Dollar Art Collection on Sale in N. Y.

Several Thousand Collectors Show Interest in Articles

By GLADWIN HILL
NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (AP)—Your correspondent tonight bought part of the multi-million dollar art collection once belonging to William Hearst.

The purchase was a rare—possibly unique—Egyptian stone dish, an inch and a half in diameter, dated as of about the year 500 B. C.

The price was 75 cents, and the dish was effected without the customary art auctioneers or intermediaries, over the counter of Hearst's department store—one of the first transactions in an unprecedented art sale.

It is the disposal of the major part of the publisher's art acquisitions of a lifetime, now the property of the International Studio Art Corporation.

It is the largest art sale in history and the first collection of any size to be disposed of, like ordinary commodities, to the general public over the counters of a department store with price tags—a method selected because the vastness and value of the collection virtually precluded its disposition through ordinary art channels to the small circle of regular collectors.

House Committee Plans Probe into Labor Stoppages

Effort May Be Made To Force Arbitration in Defense Plants

[By The Associated Press]
A plan for a congressional investigation of all labor stoppages at plants working on defense contracts will be considered by the House Judiciary Committee at a meeting today, it was announced last night (Monday) by Chairman Sumners (D-Tex.).

His announcement came as an impasse continued in the strike at the huge Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company plant, West Allis, Wis., and as fresh work-halting disputes cropped up elsewhere.

Sumners said he imagined his committee would order "pretty general hearings into the whole subject."

Coincidentally with Sumners' announcement in Washington, Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) of the House Naval committee said he was preparing and would introduce Wednesday legislation requiring mediation and arbitration of labor disputes in factories working on naval contracts.

Would Force Settlements
His bill, he said, would be designed to "compel the disputants to get together."

At Milwaukee, federal mediators announced that a joint conference had been arranged for Tuesday between the bargaining committee of the striking CIO United Automobile workers union and the management of the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company. The strike was called by the CIO-United Automobile Workers last week. A union shop was said to have been a major issue in dispute.

The plant has orders for about $40,000,000 worth of defense materials, chiefly naval equipment.

Strike in New Jersey
Walkout of members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO) halted production at the Elizabeth, N. J. plant of the Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Corp., which has a $47,343 contract for electrical cable and brass pipe. Union officials said they were demanding an immediate collective bargaining election.

At Cleveland, the CIO-United Automobile Workers called a strike at the Standard Tool Company, producers of factory equipment for many defense industries. A deadlock on contract negotiations led to the strike, union officials said.

Less Spaghetti For Italians in New Ration Order

Consumption Cut Down in Drastic Order by Government

ROME, Jan. 27 (AP)—Ration cards further restricting the consumption of spaghetti emphasized an ever-tightening food control on the home front tonight while Italian armies fought with their backs to the wall in defense of Fascism's empire.

The high command reported stiff resistance to the British advance on the Libyan port of Derna, ninety-five miles west of captured Tobruk and a desert prize because of its gushing springs.

In Albania, the war bulletin said, trainloads of dive bombers and fighter pilots from Germany assisted Italian patrols in resisting Greek pressure.

Deny Rioting Stories
The presence of these German airmen in Italy was said to have led to foreign reports that they were used to suppress rioting in the northern industrial cities of Milan and Turin, long noted for their anti-German sentiment.

Both the riots and the use of Germans in police duty were denied by authoritative spokesmen, and officials for the first time permitted publication of Belgrade dispatches as broadcast abroad that disorders in Milan and Turin were quelled. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Republicans Called Into White House Conference On the Lease-Lend Bill

Proposal To Have Board Named To Advise President Reported Considered by Leaders

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—President Roosevelt and congressional leaders of both parties discussed amendments to the lend-lease bill at an extraordinary conference tonight, said Senator Barkley (D-Ky.) said they came to no agreement or understanding on the subject.

Barkley, the Senate majority leader, said no effort was made to reach "even a tentative" agreement and that the purpose of the conference was a better understanding of the measure by all.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—A proposal for a board of legislators and former legislators to advise the president in administering the lend-lease bill was reported on the agenda for discussion at an extraordinary White House conference tonight.

For the first time since the introduction of the bill to endow President Roosevelt with wide powers to aid countries battling the Axis, Republican leaders in Congress were invited to sit in with Democrats at the meeting with President Roosevelt.

Father Ayd Opposes Continuing Of Moser as Md. Parole Director

Penitentiary Chaplain Wants Change in Important Post

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 27—Unofficial objections to the reappointment of Parole Director Herman Moser have been filed with Governor O'Connor by Father Joseph J. Ayd, chaplain of the state penitentiary, it was reported here today.

Bringing to a head several weeks of speculation, state house sources said the parole post—one of the major jobs in the "greenbag" Governor O'Connor must submit to the Senate for confirmation—had suddenly become a storm center, with Moser on one side, Father Ayd on the other, and O'Connor in the middle.

The governor declined to discuss the situation, other than to say (A) that Moser had not officially (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

595 More Men To Enter Annapolis In Near Future

Senate Also Speeds Action on Bill To Spend Big Sum for Arms

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Measures to arm the navy's fighting ships against air attack at a cost of $300,000,000 and to put 595 more midshipmen into training at Annapolis sailed through the Senate today without a ripple of opposition.

The House had passed the bills last week. The Senate naval committee held a brief hearing on them this morning and sent them to the Senate where they were passed by "unanimous consent"—the procedure used to confirm a postmaster at Podunk. The action was so speedy that the senators did not have printed copies of the bills or the committee's report when they acted. The Senate action sent the measures to the White House.

Favors 400 Small Craft
The committee also approved a $909,000,000 authorization to build 400 small naval craft and expand shipyard facilities but Chairman Walsh (D-Mass.) did not ask the Senate to shove this bill through like the others. He probably will call for a vote on Wednesday when the Senate meets again.

The Senate also is expected to act this week on a measure, already passed by the House, which would appropriate $315,000,000 for emergency construction of 200 cargo vessels by the Maritime commission. This bill is before the Commerce committee.

President Roosevelt asked Congress today to authorize the Maritime commission to contract immediately for $365,000,000 of additional expenditures in order to complete its regular 200-ship construction program by July 1.

Previous Authorization
This would supplement a previous authorization of $495,000,000 for the regular program, which is separate from the emergency 200-ship program. Contracts have been let for 180 of these vessels at an estimated cost of $446,000,000 as of January 20. Mr. Roosevelt reported, and ninety-two have been launched.

The anti-aircraft defenses provided in the $309,000,000 naval authorization consist of guns and armor. They are to be installed on (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Canadians Charge Nazi Flier with Stealing a Boat

May Attempt to Secure Return of Franz von Werra

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 27 (AP)—Baron Franz von Werra, youthful Nazi aviator, has been charged with theft by Canadian provincial police in a move interpreted by authorities here as an effort to return the escaped pilot to Canada.

Police Chief Herbert S. Myers said today a warrant filed with him by Constable Alex MacLeod of Prescott, Ont., charged the baron with theft of a $35 boat, with which he crossed the St. Lawrence river last Friday night into the United States.

The chief asserted he received the warrant Saturday night, several hours after von Werra, released in $5,000 bond on an illegal entry charge, left Ogdensburg for New York city. The warrant, he added, has not been served as far as he knows. Constable MacLeod has not asked for extradition.

Myers said the charge, brought by operators of a ferry between Ogdensburg and Prescott, might be used as a basis to send the 26-year-old aviator back to Canada, where he fled from a prison train. International law, however, forbids the pilot's return by American authorities.

Von Werra, who claims to have downed fourteen "enemy" planes before being forced down in England Sept. 7 and to have fled from two prison camps, went sightseeing in New York city today.

Secret Treaties Charge Denied by Viscount Halifax

New British Ambassador Answers Questions at Press Conference

WASHINGTON, Jan. 27 (AP)—Viscount Halifax, new British ambassador, said today that his government had no secret treaties for territorial distribution after the war.

The envoy made this statement to reporters at a press conference shortly after Senators Nye (R-ND) and Wheeler (D-Mont.) had introduced a resolution calling on belligerents to make known their war aims and to disclose whether there were any "secret treaties for the division of territorial spoils."

Halifax, the former British foreign minister, indicated that he may soon define British war aims in detail for the first time. He could not discuss it in detail at this time, he said, but "I may get an opportunity soon of saying something in public on that subject."

Victory First Aim
Briefly, however, he declared "our first war aim is to win the war and our main peace aim is with others, to reconstruct the world to as not to have another one."

Asserting that Britons would not be fighting as they are "unless they thought they were fighting for democracy," he said (Continued on Page 2, Col. 7)

Ship Used To Bring King George and Queen Mary to U. S. Shelled after Torpedoing

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP)—Tropical Radio reported tonight the steamer Empress of Australia had radioed for assistance, asserting she had been torpedoed 200 miles off Dakar, French West Africa.

Tropical said the vessel began sending short wave distress signals at 10:40 p. m. (EST), saying she was "down by the bow." A few minutes later, the station reported, the ship's operator said she was being shelled again.

At 10:55 p. m. (EST), Tropical said, the stricken vessel attempted to send out another message but the signals were unintelligible and ceased abruptly.

The Empress of Australia, the station said, had called Tropical Radio direct with the messages.

The Empress of Australia, a 21,833-ton vessel 590 feet long, was built in 1914 and was owned by the Canadian Pacific Railway Company.

She was the ship that brought the king and queen of England to this continent for a visit in Canada and the United States.

Used as Troop Transport
The Empress of Australia has been reported in service recently as a troop transport. Last June the 589-foot liner was reported, with six others, awaiting a convoy at Freeport, Africa.

Last Oct. 3 she stopped to rescue the entire crew of torpedoed Dutch liner Volendam in mid-Atlantic. The Empress of Australia had left Liverpool on that voyage with the refugee ship City of Benares, but had turned back for repairs to her mine belt.

When the king and queen of England made their trip to America in 1939, they came here on the Empress of Australia.

Another Canadian-Pacific liner, the 42,346-ton Empress of Britain, which took the royal couple back to England, was torpedoed and sunk in October with a loss of forty-five men while the British were attempting to tow her back to port after she had been badly damaged by Nazi bombers.

Gypsy Rose Lee Sues for Divorce

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (AP)—Mrs. Arnold R. Mitty, better known as Gypsy Rose Lee, filed suit for divorce today in Superior court.

The strip teaseer alleged her husband, a New York dental supply manufacturer, treated her cruelly on Nov. 6, 1938, and again on Nov. 8, when he used "obscene and abusive language."

Mrs. Mitty is now appearing at a North Side theater cafe.

Her suit set forth that she and Mitty were married in a water taxi off Santa Ana, Cal., Aug. 13, 1937, and a second time at Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 27. She wants the decree to take care of both ceremonies.

German Submarine Sinks Ship with 500,000 Doses of Flu Vaccine Aboard

New American Experiment Discovered by Accident, Doctor Asserts

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor
NEW YORK, Jan. 27—A German submarine has sunk a ship carrying 500,000 doses of the new American flu vaccine en route to England, says the American Medical Association News.

The date and name of the ship were not given. The shipments of this new hope for stopping influenza have been kept secret.

Although there was reason to believe that the half million doses were not the major part of the shipments, the News regarded the loss as a major medical disaster.

It quoted the official journal Hygiene, of the American Medical Association, as saying:

"Thus was struck in an indirect manner at one of the great investigations of modern science, that might have brought increased freedom from disease to millions and millions of people."

Discovery an Accident
The vaccine is the new stuff discovered in one of the most dramatic medical "accidents" on record at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research here.

A few ferrets got distemper. Ferrets, which have both flu and distemper, were in use as guinea pigs for searching for a flu vaccine. A large number of ferrets were vaccinated as a major medical disaster. (Continued on Page 2, Col. 8)

Half of Nation Covered by Snow; Cold in South

Airline Operations Curtailed and Traffic Conditions Are Bad

(By The Associated Press)
Snow blanketed the northern half of the nation last (Monday) night and cold swept in to curtail it. Snow fell over the week-end from Nebraska to New England and edged into Virginia. The cold dipped into Arkansas, Oklahoma and the Texas panhandle, and was expected to extend into Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama.

Falling temperatures in much of the Great Lakes region and along the Atlantic seaboard followed in the wake of the storm.

Readings of fifteen above zero were forecast for Illinois and Indiana. Ohio's temperatures generally were in the twenties, and were expected to drop.

Florida and California winter resorts—where the sun is wont to shine warmly at this time of the year—did better than the rest of the nation, but didn't brag of the heat. Florida reported lows of fifty-four at Jacksonville, fifty-eight at Tampa and sixty at Miami.

In California, such readings as fifty at Los Angeles and San Diego, and forty-five at Fresno were recorded.

The coldest spots in the nation were Caribou, Me., with twenty below zero, and Minot, N. D., with sixteen below.

Airline operations at New York's La Guardia field were virtually at a standstill with a total of 110 of 117 scheduled flights between mid-night Sunday and 6 p. m. (E.S.T.) Monday cancelled. Baltimore and Atlanta reported cancellation of flights because of poor visibility.

Most through highways were cleared quickly. Maryland marshalled 800 men and 200 snowplows to clear a fall ranging up to six inches in the western part of the state. More snow or freezing rain was forecast.

military equipment which would be sent to belligerents.

Would Report to Congress

Some supporters of the bill hoped such an amendment would offset criticism that under the measure the president could "give away the navy" without consulting any one. In the same vein, another suggested amendment would require periodic reports to Congress on the progress of the aid program.

Most supporters of the measure seemed agreed that a two-year limitation on the life of the legislation would be written into it. There was talk, also, of fixing a $2,000,000,000 "ceiling" on the expenditures during that period.

To satisfy some opponents of the measure, the administration leaders were said to be prepared to attach a clause guaranteeing that no American naval units would be used to convoy supplies to the belligerents.

In a radio speech tonight Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee expressed approval of the lease-lend bill, but suggested a time limit on the presidential powers, a clause making it clear that the navy would not go on convoy duty, and a provision for periodic reports to Congress.

Hull Testifies in Secret

Earlier, Secretary of State Hull had appeared before the committee to present the administration viewpoint. Although the session was secret, informed sources said he denied charges that the bill would lead to war, and said that American assistance was "largely responsible" for the fact that the Nazis have not invaded England up to now.

Later Senator Van Nuys (D-Ind.) who had not disclosed his stand on the measure, said that Hull had presented a "beautiful case." He said he believed Hull had "made some support" for the bill, but Senator Nye (R-Ind.) disagreed, saying that in his opinion no votes had been changed. Nye said Hull was questioned about certain issues but "just didn't choose" to deal with those issues directly.

During the day, Arthur B. Purvis, chairman of the British council of North American supply, said that no important munitions contracts were being placed in America pending action on the pending bill.

No Important Contracts

Purvis, after a conference with secretary of the treasury Morgenthau, told reporters: "We are buying a few scraps now and then, perhaps a little fire hose or something like that, but we haven't the money for any more large contracts for weapons."

The White House conference tonight was announced by speaker Rayburn.

Rayburn listed these conferees: Senator Barkley (D-Ky.), Chairman George (D-Ga) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee; Senator McNary (R-Ore.), Senate minority leader.

Rayburn himself, Chairman Bloom (D-NY) of the House Foreign Affairs committee; Representative Luther A. Johnson (D-Tex.), Senior Democratic member of the committee; Representative Martin of Massachusetts, the Republican floor leader, and Representative McCormack (D-Mass.), the majority floor leader.

Italians in Flight as British Push New Drive

East African Campaign Reported Gaining Momentum Daily

CAIRO, Egypt, Jan. 27 (AP)—A precipitate retreat of Italians into Eritrea from their last post on the border with the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, UMM Hagar, was reported in military circles here tonight, and the British were said to be in hot pursuit.

While the British East African campaign apparently was gaining momentum, another branch of General Sir Archibald P. Wavell's army was said to be strengthening its positions 2,000 miles away at Derna, the next Libyan port in the path of the major drive in North Africa.

British vanguards in Italian Eritrea were reported only a few miles from Agordat, an important station on the railroad eastward toward Asmara, the Eritrean capital 70 miles beyond, and Massawa, Eritrea's only good port.

His remarks about non-involvement in war were said to have been made in response to questions by Senator Johnson (R-Calif.). Johnson, who contends the administration foreign policy is heading the nation toward war, questioned Hull sharply and at length.

Meanwhile, the House committee had Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations and ranking officer of the navy on its witness stand. He later told reporters he "stuck to naval matters" but was "wide open in telling" his "thoughts to the committee."

In the Senate, at the same time, Senator Nye (R-Ind.) introduced, jointly with Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.), a resolution calling on the European belligerents to state their war aims, the condition upon which they would agree to an immediate peace, and asking for details of any "secret treaties" which may exist for the "division of territorial spoils."

"Before we go any farther with this gamble to aid to Britain," Nye said, "we ought to have more information about the cause we are serving." The resolution, he added, was "part of an effort to make certain our country is not going to play a sucker part."

In reply Senator Barkley (D-Ky.), the majority leader, said that Nye's demand for information was "just as logical" as though a citizen seeking an "aggressor" holding a knife at the throat of a neighbor should ask the combatants to "stop and enumerate what they are fighting over and what started it before deciding to help either one."

A hundred spectators had gathered for Hull's testimony, looking forward to a series of inevitable clashes between the secretary of state and the committee members who have been critical of administration foreign policy.

Crowd Disappointed
Its disappointment was consequently great when it was announced that Hull would appear in executive session. The cabinet officer said at the outset that he had information for the committee "which should not be made known to every other nation" and the publication of which "would not be compatible with the public interest and might be injurious to national safety."

So the crowd was unceremoniously bundled out of the big, glittery Senate caucus room by the capital police. Some stood about the doorway for a time, hoping the hearings might be opened again. Eventually, however, they gave up and went elsewhere.

Members of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce have been invited to sponsor one of their city's "most beautiful young women" in the Fourth Annual Analea Festival Beauty Pageant to be held in the Ravine Gardens in Palatka, Fla., March 9, which will climax a pre-legislative conference of the Florida Junior Chamber of Commerce and Southern Jamboree to be staged in the city that weekend.

O'Connor Refuses To Extradite Man On Check Charge

Governor Holds Francis Hoskins Is Apparently Not Guilty

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 27 (AP)—Governor O'Connor refused today to approve the extradition to New Jersey of Francis L. Hoskins, Bel Air hotel manager, on bad check charges, holding evidence before him did not indicate Hoskins had committed a crime.

The governor said Hoskins was indicted in Cape May county, N. J. Documents submitted to him showed, he said, that checks on which the indictment was based were mailed from Maryland to New Jersey in December, 1938, but no extradition request was made until Jan. 4, 1941.

Admitted Indebtedness
Meanwhile, the governor continued, Hoskins had executed several agreements with the Wildwood, N. J., Trust Company, had admitted indebtedness of $1,250 to the bank, and had made regular payments on it.

"It was not until he defaulted recently in the payment of one of the notes that the prosecution was instituted," O'Connor said in a statement, adding that Maryland's extradition law stipulated that no such proceedings should be instituted to "enforce a private claim."

"Reputable Citizen"
"Hoskins is a reputable citizen of Maryland, who has not previously been arrested, x x x He is still engaged in business and is of course amenable to process in any civil proceeding for the recovery by the prosecuting witness of any amounts that may be due them."

"I am convinced that the prosecution was instituted for the primary purpose of enforcing the payment of a private debt and I accordingly decline to grant the extradition warrant."

Earlier, O'Connor issued requisition papers on the governor of Pennsylvania for the return to Maryland of Abraham Schusterman, alias Al Gordon, indicted in Baltimore for false pretenses.

Father Ayd

indicated whether he was a candidate for reappointment and (B) that no "official" protest or objection to Moser's reappointment had been filed.

He added that pressing legislative matters had delayed his consideration of new appointments and that "it's too early yet to talk about them."

Moser was out of town and Father Ayd was not immediately available for comment.

Sources close to O'Connor said they were informed Moser originally had decided not to seek reappointment. Subsequently, they continued, Moser learned that Father Ayd had objected to his continuance as parole director.

Moser, it was said, then promptly told friends he would ask reappointment—despite a desire to return to his private law practice—since he wouldn't, under any circumstances, be put in the position of quitting under fire—or seeming to do so.

Moser's decisions in several cases which Father Ayd had investigated personally were said to have been involved in the situation.

Committee Cause Delayed
It appeared, meanwhile, that completion of the "greenbag" might be considerably delayed by failure of various county State General committees to send in nominations promptly for vacancies on boards of election supervisors.

Two weeks ago, the governor wrote each committee requesting that nominations be filed by Jan. 20. Many of the nominations still are outstanding.

O'Connor said today that enabling legislation, to permit the State Roads Commission to buy the Claborn-Annapolis Ferry Company would be the "first order of business" for the administration when the General Assembly reconvenes tomorrow.

Emergency Bill Soon
He said the necessary emergency bill would be introduced within a day or two and that he was hopeful the legislature would act on it expeditiously. The Roads Commission cannot consummate the sale unless the law is passed.

Pamphlets explaining provisions of the state guard bill, will be distributed to legislatures this week, as part of the administration's drive for its quick passage. The pamphlets clarify several questions raised by assemblymen, O'Connor said, particularly with reference to sections specifying that the home defense unit may be operative only while the national guard is in federal service.

Robinson, chief of the bureau of ships, told the committee that the additional defenses were dictated by lessons of the European war, and that once they are installed "you can be sure that our ships will be a little better than the other fellow's if we get into any sort of mixup."

Walsh reported that the navy had 2,590 planes of all types on hand January 1 with 6,122 on order. He did not disclose when these would be in service.

German Soldiers Cheered in Italy On March South

Civil Population Acclaims Nazi Troops Passing Through Milan

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
BERLIN, Jan. 27—German troops passing through Milan enroute to southern Italy were reported today to have been heartily cheered yesterday by the Italian population.

Rumors of an uprising in Milan and Turin were categorically denied, meanwhile, in German government quarters. It was stated that no German troops whatever are in Turin.

(Authoritative Fascists in Rome also denied foreign reports of rioting in northern Italian cities and of German soldiers having been sent in to police the country. The Fascists, branding the reports as a "ridiculous invention without the slightest basis," said the only Nazi soldiers in Italy were members of the German air force.)

German authorities profess to know nothing about troops other than air force detachments having gone to Italy. Asked what the reference to the passage of troops through Milan meant, they said: "It is natural that, once the air force has been assigned to a certain task in a certain place, all sorts of reinforcements and replacements must be sent from time to time."

No figures are available on the size of the forces sent to Italy's aid. A Nazi authority commented that "this will become evident once the archives of war are opened after the war is over."

German picture agencies released today photographs showing German fliers on Italy's Mediterranean island of Sicily.

On the war front, the Nazi high command announced British raiders killed four persons and injured six in western and central Germany last night. Damages were said to have been slight.

Two direct hits on one British merchantman were reported in "successful" German attacks last night on shipping off the southeast British coast. The loss of three German planes was acknowledged.

DNE, German official news agency, said that a British air attack today on German minesweepers was repulsed that two of the attacking planes were so badly damaged that they must be considered lost.

of planes did the low-flying topped by many others flying several thousand feet above the jagged mountains.

As the Germans flew in Norway, so did this lower flight. The planes went through the gorges dipping to less than 200 feet from the ground to bomb and machinegun Greek positions in Kilsura valley.

During the first two months of the war the Italians dropped only a few sticks of bombs in raiding Albanian villages. However, in the past few days whole flights of Italian bombers attacked small villages and attempted to wipe them out completely.

In some cases scarcely a stone is left standing in some of these mountain hamlets, and the entire population has fled to the mountains.

For the first time during the war dive-bombers which were used so effectively in France by the Germans made their appearance over a Greek city recently, scoring two direct hits on a causeway with two 1,000-pound bombs which are larger than anything the Italians had been using.

Greek Command Alarmed
This growing air opposition is causing Greek anxiety for their spring attack plans since it is a forerunner of what may be expected when winter weather lifts.

In many cases the obvious Italian advantage in the air has caused Greek infantry to halt at noon, dig in and wait for darkness before resuming.

Greek officers of course are hoping to obtain large numbers of planes from the United States and Britain by spring.

"You see how it is," the chief of staff in charge said. "It's terrible. We must have help in airplanes. Many airplanes."

with the help of German troops.

"Just in case the people of Milan and Turin are not aware of what's happening in their respective cities," was the sarcastic commentary printed with the reports.

(Authoritative Berlin quarters also denied reports which were broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting System on the basis of its Belgrade correspondent's dispatches.

The German sources said German troops were cheered as they passed through Milan yesterday enroute to south Italy.)

An order to serve spaghetti, rice and noodle dishes in restaurants only upon presentation of food cards was a new departure and closed a loophole in previous restrictions which had dealt only with the quantities and variety of food served.

The ration tickets go into effect February 1, and limit each restaurant patron to one dish a day, either at noon or in the evening, of spaghetti, noodles, rice and other wheat paste foods which are soup courses in Italy.

Irish Sweepstakes Winner Will Keep His $97,623; Wants To Wed

His Family Will Not Share in Ticket, Court Jury Decides

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (AP)—The rolling Ruggieri family which got that way over division of a $97,623 Irish sweepstakes prize had only a few minor lawsuits left in sight after a Bronx Supreme Court jury decided today that August Ruggieri was the "sole owner" of the winning ticket.

August sued his brother Nicholas and his father Julius for $7,800 and $7,000, respectively.

Nicholas, in turn, had sought $60,000 from August and Max Rosner, a lawyer, as his share of the winnings, and for punitive damages for a beating he said August administered to him in a Lancaster, Pa., hotel room. August once was a bantamweight boxer.

Said August jubilantly: "The first thing I am going to do is to look for a girl and I'm going to get married."

Different with Nicholas
With Nicholas, it was different. He told reporters before the verdict was in that if he won he would immediately marry Miss Mary Doran, 28-year-old taxi dancer who was with him in Lancaster at the time of the brotherly fight.

Nicholas and August have pending a $5,000 action brought by a lawyer who claims they received advice from him on how to handle the sweepstakes winnings.

Samuel Siegel, August's lawyer, brought out in his summation that Miss Doran is planning a $3,000 action against August, alleging that he punched her during the melee in Lancaster.

"She wants her slice," declared Siegel. "Everyone wants a crack at the dough."

August testified that he deposited his sweepstakes winnings in thirty-three savings banks, using Nicholas' name for several of the accounts. He did this, he said, to reduce income taxes.

Another Slap at Nicholas
Nicholas, he contended, "wrongfully" withdrew some of the money for a vacation trip to Lancaster with Miss Doran. August further contended that Nicholas gave their father $7,000 without his (August's) consent, to pay off a mortgage on the family home in the Bronx.

August's lawyer announced he would ask the district attorney to investigate what he termed "a dastardly conspiracy" against August, adding that he wanted to find out "who put Nicholas up to this."

Under the law, August may recover only one of the judgments against his brother and father, usually the largest. Nicholas and Julius obtained a thirty-day stay of payment in order to consider possible further action.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Balkan reports of rioting and disorders in northern Italy may be exaggerated or premature; but they are significant even though unconfirmed.

Tense denials from both Rome and Berlin do not alter the fact that diplomatic observers nearest the scene believe Italy ripe for some such outbreak. They appear to be aware of increasing public unrest in Italy. There must have been some fire to cause so much smoke.

Defeat-dogged Italian armies in Albania and Africa are menaced with further disaster. To what extent the Italian masses are aware of the scope of the defeats on both fronts is uncertain.

The Italian public has fresh evidence direct from Rome, however, that the battle to crack the British blockade of Italy is not going well. It came in the form of new and rigid rationing orders, applying even to the staple of the peasant diet, spaghetti, as well as to rice and to other wheat-flour edibles.

Many Losses, No Gains
Sooner or later there will be a realization in Italy that she has been paying dearly for participation in a war out of which she has got nothing but bitter results. Her losses in the field already exceed the aggregate of admitted German casualties in the conquest of Poland, Norway, the low countries and France and she has nothing to show for them but the probability of even greater disasters in Albania and in north and east Africa.

Desperate efforts to avert a final collapse of the southern Italian front in Albania seem to have failed despite a second Mussolini shake-up in the Fascist command there.

As for Libya, Rome admits that British advance units are already investing the Derna coastal pivot of a new Italian defense line. That they are also appearing at or around the Mekki desert cross-roads pivot, forty miles southward in the interior is certain.

Face Defeat in Libya
The clear prospect is that the thrice-shattered Italian Libyan army will soon be cooped up on the heights of the Barca plateau, powerless to prevent the British from over-running at will all the rest of Libya to the borders of French Tunisia on the west, Marshal Graziani has neither the men nor equipment left to do more than stand hopeless siege in the highlands until his supplies give out or his army revolts.

The Italian prospects in east Africa are not much better. British patrols are stabbing forward in Eritrea, already 60 miles or more within Italian borders, in an effort to cut the Eritrean army in half.

Nor has the Ethiopian uprising against Italian conquerors as yet hundreds of thousands of items, paintings, sculpture, furniture, armor, china, jewelry—everything from medieval oak-paneled rooms to Benjamin Franklin's spectacles.

Several thousand specially invited guests, ranging from museum officials to charge account holders, Saks-Fifth avenue, Gimbels' and others, were more of the collection will be sold, attended the opening. The first purchaser was David K. Bruce, Andrew Mellon's son-in-law, who bought a fine set of delect china for $250.

$25,000 Asked for Bowl

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., amazingly fondled a beautiful jeweled agate bowl attributed to Benvenuto Cellini, and priced at $25,000. It was not disclosed whether he bought anything.

But many others did. The offer that Abraham Lincoln used the White House went for $750. A book collector eagerly snapped up Anthony Trollope's original manuscript of "Orley Farm," a George Washington's leather-bound four-volume set of "Don Quixote" was there, for $2,900. There was a set of four beautiful medieval tapestries at $197,500. And pewter jewelry and knickknacks ranged down to 35 cents.

The biggest item in the sale, fifteenth century Spanish pottery, dismantled in 14,000 boxes, a Bronx warehouse, for which Hearst is reputed to have $500,000—now priced at $50, what it cost to be re-created storage.

The sale will continue through the spring. Dr. Armand Hammer, the art dealer handling the sale, said it was expected that everything, despite its huge aggregate value, would be cleared out, because every item had been priced to without regard to its original in their conversation that it had twice that long.

"He was very gracious," Willkie said upon leaving the prime minister. "I knew he was a great man. I know it now even more."

From Churchill's official denials he went to call on Bevin, too, hit it off from the Bevin was due for a cabinet meeting at 6 p. m., but when the approached they still were late and it took the urging of a secretary finally to get the labor minister off to his meeting.

Willkie Shows Anger
Grinning through most of the Willkie spoke bitterly but not when he viewed the blackened ruins in London and "city" where, he was told, 3,000 books had been burned.

"I thought the burning of Poster Row, the street where books are published, rather symbolic observed. 'They destroyed place where the truth is told.'"

Willkie said he found the destruction just as he expected it, exclaimed "the way it is, he dealt with astonishes me; they grand people."

"Take me to your toughest speakers," he said. "I want to see very worst ones you've got. I talk to everyone who will talk me—the people in the street, shelters, in hotels, in trains—everywhere."

Wants to Hear Debate
"I also am going to the House of Commons to hear one of the debates."

Willkie, insisting he is "pessimistic Willkie" on a private found that he was taken for a walk when he called on Bevin, the labor minister where he required to fill out an official statement his business.

He left unanswered the question asking "the nature of your business," though an enterprising clerk suggested filling in "aid Britain."

To the amazement of the world the vaccine protected all the feral against not only distemper, but influenza.

Previous Efforts Failed
This was the more surprising cause previous vaccinations of actually the same sort had not developed any protection against influenza.

The new vaccine proved "stable" and worked when tried on human volunteers.

The final step necessary was vaccination of millions of humans against a nationally threatened epidemic. England, now threatened with the American flu epidemic, offered an ideal testing ground.

Radio Schedules Beverly Bayne, Of Movie Fame

Star of Old Essanay Will Be in Grand Central Feature

New York, Jan. 27.—Way back in 1913 a Minneapolis girl named Beverly Bayne wandered into the Essanay movie studios in Chicago. She got a job and soon skyrocketed to playing opposite the great Francis X. Bushman.

Tuesday night she comes back to some of her old fans in the Grand Central Station radio drama on WJZ-NBC at 9 p. m. She will be featured with George Coulouris and Eustace Wyatt, noted British actors.

Another noted Englishman, Sir Wilfrid Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times, will be the main speaker on a broad-cast of the sixteenth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense at 8:15 on MBS.

Other defense talks scheduled are: Thomas W. Lamont, vice chairman of the board of J. P. Morgan Co., before the Merchants Association of New York at 1:15 on WJZ-NBC; Niles Trammell, president of NBC, before the Women's Patriotic Conference at 2:30 on the same network.

A young aeronautical engineer fleeing the war meets a girl on ship-board on the First Nighter drama "Somewhere on Park Avenue" at 8:30 (WABC-CBS). He writes her name on his passport, which later is picked up for government inspection.

Miss Doub's Proposal About Divorce Cases

IN submitting her "surprise" measure in the House of Delegates at Annapolis, which pertains to the publication in newspapers of the proceedings of divorce cases, Miss Elizabeth Doub, of this city, ruthlessly tread upon the Bill of Rights in our fundamental laws, both federal and state, with the exception of the penalty she suggests.

Yes, she is right about that and others who have concern for the protection of civil rights as contained in our organic laws won't like it either.

As a matter of fact, Miss Doub's proposal does not comport with democratic principles, for one thing, and is entirely superfluous, for another, being nothing more nor less than a re-statement of established court procedure in Maryland with the exception of the penalty she suggests.

It is unnecessary to repeat here the wording of the Bill of Rights in the federal constitution respecting the guarantee of freedom of speech, religion, the press and the right of assembly. It may be pertinent, however, to note that the constitution of Maryland, in its prefacing Declaration of Rights, (Article 40) makes the safeguard of press freedom even more emphatic:

"That the liberty of the press ought to be inviolably preserved, that every citizen of the state ought to be allowed to speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible for the abuse of that privilege."

Now what have the courts of Maryland said about that? Not very much for the reason that these rights have been scrupulously observed by them. But in Negley vs. Farrow, 60 Md. 158, it was declared that:

"The liberty of the press, guaranteed by the constitution, is a right belonging to every one, proprietor of a newspaper or not, to publish whatever he pleases without license, interference or control of the government, being responsible alone for the abuse of the privilege."

What, then, do the courts of Maryland do about the publication of divorce proceedings?

In the opinion of this newspaper, they have taken it fairly well in hand. There are, in Allegany county for example, three standing examiners, who are appointed to take evidence in divorce cases and these proceedings take place in camera (in private) when the cases are not contested. The testimony is submitted in writing to the judge in his chambers and, after careful examination of the evidence so produced, he renders his decision in the case. There is no further publicity than the final decision as to whether the divorce is granted or denied.

Where the cases are contested, however, the case necessarily comes into open court but on the equity side and not before a jury. Yet here, if the judge regards the case as being of such a sensational or "dirty" nature as to offend public morals, he can either hold the hearings in chambers or hand down an order asking that the proceedings be not published, which order can be backed by a contempt penalty. Usually the former course is pursued.

Where, then, is the need for the proscription now proposed in all seriousness by Miss Doub? She is under a mistaken impression if she feels that newspapers are crazy about publishing sensational or filthy divorce testimony, or the allegations usually listed in blanket manner in legal hopes of catching something or other in the lot. Indeed, they would rather not, in consideration of public morals and more particularly the feelings of innocent children and relatives, even though they are usually importuned by one or the other of the principals to publish them.

If Miss Doub would press the restriction, she could do better by attempting to prescribe a mandate upon judges, which this newspaper feels is quite unnecessary, but in stepping so lightly upon the Bill of Rights by proposing a fine for the publication of facts, she is undertaking a foolish enterprise, which is palpably unconstitutional.

The Nenes can always grant Miss Doub the sincerity of her convictions, but it cannot refrain from noting that the manner in which she plopped her proposal, after a build-up utilizing the element of suspense, she gained rather a good piece of publicity than a showing that what she offered is worth the candle it burns. On that score, she is entitled to a compliment for her cleverness—in fact, she has even roped in the Nenes along with other newspapers. It is "good stuff" if you know how and when to work it.

It Looks Like a Rather Large Order at That

IN his testimony before the House Foreign Affairs committee in Washington, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said he couldn't see why people "should turn up their noses at 3,000 miles in the Atlantic and 5,000 in the Pacific when we see the trouble Mr. Hitler has been having with twenty-two miles."

It may be wondered whether too much fear has been engendered over the possibility of an air invasion of this country, or this hemisphere, by Hitler, if, having washed his hands of all the troubles he has on his hands in Europe (provided he could do so) he should decide on trying to grab us off.

Gen. Johnson is understood to have referred to the west and north coasts of Africa as the potential danger points for a Hitlerian take-off. Samuel B. Pettengill, "the gentleman from Indiana," who is among those who believe unreasoning fear has been stirred up in this country over possibility of an air invasion, at least for some time to come, has presented some interesting facts about it. He was prompted to do so by the official statement that Africa is no farther from South America than Denver from Washington, a statement he thinks is an instance of our being scared into this war as we were in 1917.

Pettengill points out that from Dakar, South Africa, to Pernambuco, Brazil, is 1,800 miles. Hitler would have to fly bombers from Berlin to Dakar, from Dakar to Pernambuco and thence to Washington, New York, Chicago and Emporia, Kan., in his efforts to blow us all to bits. It might be a good thing, Pettengill thinks, if uneasy persons should take a globe or a world map and take a good look at these distances.

And here is an important consideration: Pettengill notes that there is no petroleum at Pernambuco and practically none elsewhere in Brazil. Accordingly, Hitler would have to build immense storage tanks, refineries, machine shops, air fields, barracks and hospitals where his bombers stop. And, after getting to Pernambuco, he would have to go another 2,000 miles to Venezuela and Trinidad for petroleum and haul it back, a round trip of 4,000 miles, and, as there are no pipe lines, by ships.

So, it appears a pretty large order, perhaps a much larger undertaking than many have been led to suppose. Before Hitler could get around to all these things, the United States would be, or should be, well prepared to handle him so far as bombing is concerned. The whole possibility thus appears to simmer down somewhat in view of these considerations.

Here's a Worthwhile Message From a Republican Elder

FRANK O. LOWDEN, former governor of Illinois, who ran into a deadlock with the late Gen. Leonard Wood in the Republican national convention at Chicago that nominated Harding as a compromise, has just celebrated his eightieth birthday anniversary, on which occasion he issued a message good for all our Gloomy Gusses to digest.

Lowden made his statement because he believed we are becoming altogether too pessimistic—because a lot of people talk as though the world were coming to an end, something he does not believe.

"I know that these are dark days," Lowden said. "I still believe, however, in the divine order of the universe. Under that order mankind, from the beginning, has always moved forward."

"There have been lapses in this movement, but following there have always been net gains. Under this beneficent order the lot of the average man has continuously improved."

"Under the representative republic which our fathers founded, this improvement has been more marked than under any other form of government devised by man. Unless we destroy it ourselves, the great republic will endure."

"I have never lost my faith that right triumphs in the end. If we shall exhibit the high courage which our heritage calls for, I think we may look forward to the future with faith and hope."

A stimulating message, indeed, which comes opportunely amidst the unreasonable fears too many people have been entertaining.

A psychologist says everybody ought to take a week's vacation from worrying. Does he know of anything these days not to worry about?

Poker playing may be injurious to the heart, says a doctor. We don't know about that, but we do know it can be fatal to the billfold.

Man in Rome was jailed for listening to the radio. One would think anyone over there wouldn't have the heart to listen.

Because I served in that last war and am now past the draft age, I have carefully refrained so far from patting any young fellow on the shoulder and telling him that a year in the army will make a man of him. My point of view is that young men should be taught how to help defend their country but that older men shouldn't be patronizing.

Whenever I try to steam up a grouch against somebody who hasn't returned a couple of books of mine, I suddenly remember a few books at home that I have failed to return.

Theoretically I dislike politicians; actually I never knew a politician I disliked.

There are times when I tell myself I am not responsible for my disposition but inherited it. . . . But what right have I to pick on my ancestors?

I was asked what I would do if I had a million dollars and couldn't answer the question. . . . I hope, however, that I wouldn't spend half my time worrying about losing it.

Remark from a reader in Cumberland, Maryland: "I read your column every day. Sometimes I agree with your sentiments and sometimes I don't. . . . I'm not surprised, Reader. If you'd written that you always agree with what I write, I wouldn't have believed you. Such things can't happen."

My father warned me never to carry a gun through a fence but to push it ahead of me and then crawl after it. . . . A more dangerous practice is giving advice to a man who is complaining of his wife. I thought of that myself.

A father was just in to see me, saying, "I yelled at my little girl this morning and I've felt like a dirty dog all day. She deserved to be yelled at but that doesn't make me feel any better."

I had a box of black walnuts at home. . . . If I had a piece of railroad iron, an old-fashioned sad-iron and some horseshoe nails for "pick" and if I were about ten years old cracking those nuts in the back yard on a sunny autumn day—everything would be perfect.

Power of Purse Should Be Kept, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON
WASHINGTON, Jan. 27. — Two apparent absurdities attend the arguments for the Morgenthau "loose-end" bill, now being so hotly debated.

One is the insistence of certain sincere congressional advocates that the bill does not surrender to the executive the constitutional safeguards against dictatorship—the famous congressional "power of the purse."

The Magna Carta squeezed out of the despotic King John Lackland a lot of promises to respect certain rights of the people. They were intended to limit the British monarchy and put certain shackles on the "divine right of kings." But they weren't of much use until they were implemented by the rise of parliamentary government and especially the insistence of the House of Commons on the absolute "power of the purse"—taxation and appropriation—in a battle which finally beheaded Charles I and finally resulted in the ousting of the Stuart dynasty. In our own and English experience, it is the strongest weapon of democracy.

Our constitution gives Congress alone the power to declare war and to "raise and support armies." To this latter highly important grant the constitution attaches a condition, "but no appropriation of money to that use shall be for a longer term than two years."

Under the "loose-end" bill, the president is given authority to transfer to another nation any "defense article" he desires. The word "defense article" is defined to mean any conceivable military or naval resource which the United States owns or may hereafter acquire. When this is attacked as a surrender by Congress to the executive of its power of the purse in war, the answer is made that the bill appropriates no money and hence, that Congress, through its power to appropriate, still controls action under the bill.

Right off the bat, it is apparent that as to the many billions of dollars worth of military and naval equipment that this country now has, the answer simply is not true. The bill gives the president authority to transfer it with no further appropriation whatever.

Barn-Door Loophole
Neither is it necessarily true as to gifts of new equipment. It is true under the bill that before he could, for example, order a new battleship built, expressly announced as a gift to China, he would have to go to Congress for authority. But there is a loophole that is as broad as a barn door. In this crisis, Congress has refused to appropriate to build armament for the United States and it is as sure as sunrise that it will refuse none in the future. But if this bill is passed, not a nickel can be spent on armament by this government, which would not automatically fall under the proposed grant of presidential power to transfer that armament to another country as soon as it is finished or even before. He doesn't have to go back to Congress for appropriations before he can transfer American equipment and resources.

It is an even more complete surrender of the power of the purse in favor of other nations than would even be openly requested by a president in favor of the United States.

The other apparent absurdity is the urge for haste in passing this bill without debate on the ground that the British crises may be expected within sixty to ninety days and that every day is delay and that this bill imperils her.

Not for a Year
As is well known in Washington and was testified by Mr. Knudsen, no matter what new orders Britain might give our industry, no important additional equipment can be made and furnished to England within ninety days—or indeed for a year. Our most available factories are chock-a-block full with orders for ourselves and Britain. To the extent that she may not get production in time, it is almost wholly her own fault in not ordering it in time, or in changing designs after she had ordered it.

The only way we can aid Britain more at once is to transfer ships of our own navy and merchant fleet, or tanks, planes and guns of our own forces. We haven't enough land or air equipment on hand or immediately forthcoming even to train, much less equip our own troops and the president has said that the suggestion that he would transfer our ships is Mother Goose nonsense.

A mixed dose of one-third common sense, one-third frankness, and one-third honesty would be a great help in this debate.—Distributed by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Cooling-Off Plan Appears Good
From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer
With labor trouble bobbing up in various defense industries, and the question of anti-trust legislation assuming a large place in congressional discussion, a plan recently advanced by William M. Leiserson, of the National Labor Relations Board, merits careful consideration.

In brief, Dr. Leiserson proposes a centralized federal mediation service, operating under a legal requirement that a thirty-day waiting period precede any strike or lockout. During this period, no change would be made in working conditions, and conferences leading to adjustment would be obligatory. If these conferences failed to bring a settlement, the government's mediation agencies would undertake to adjust the differences.

Whether or not a new mediation board such as suggested by Dr. Leiserson would be necessary, may be open to question. The work probably could be assumed by that present Conciliation Service. That, however, is mere detail. The essence of the plan is the thirty-day "cooling off" period, during which conferences would be held. Employers, we feel sure, would welcome such an arrangement, and labor unions should do likewise from a standpoint of self-defense if nothing more. For in the present state of the public temper, anti-strike legislation would receive wide support.

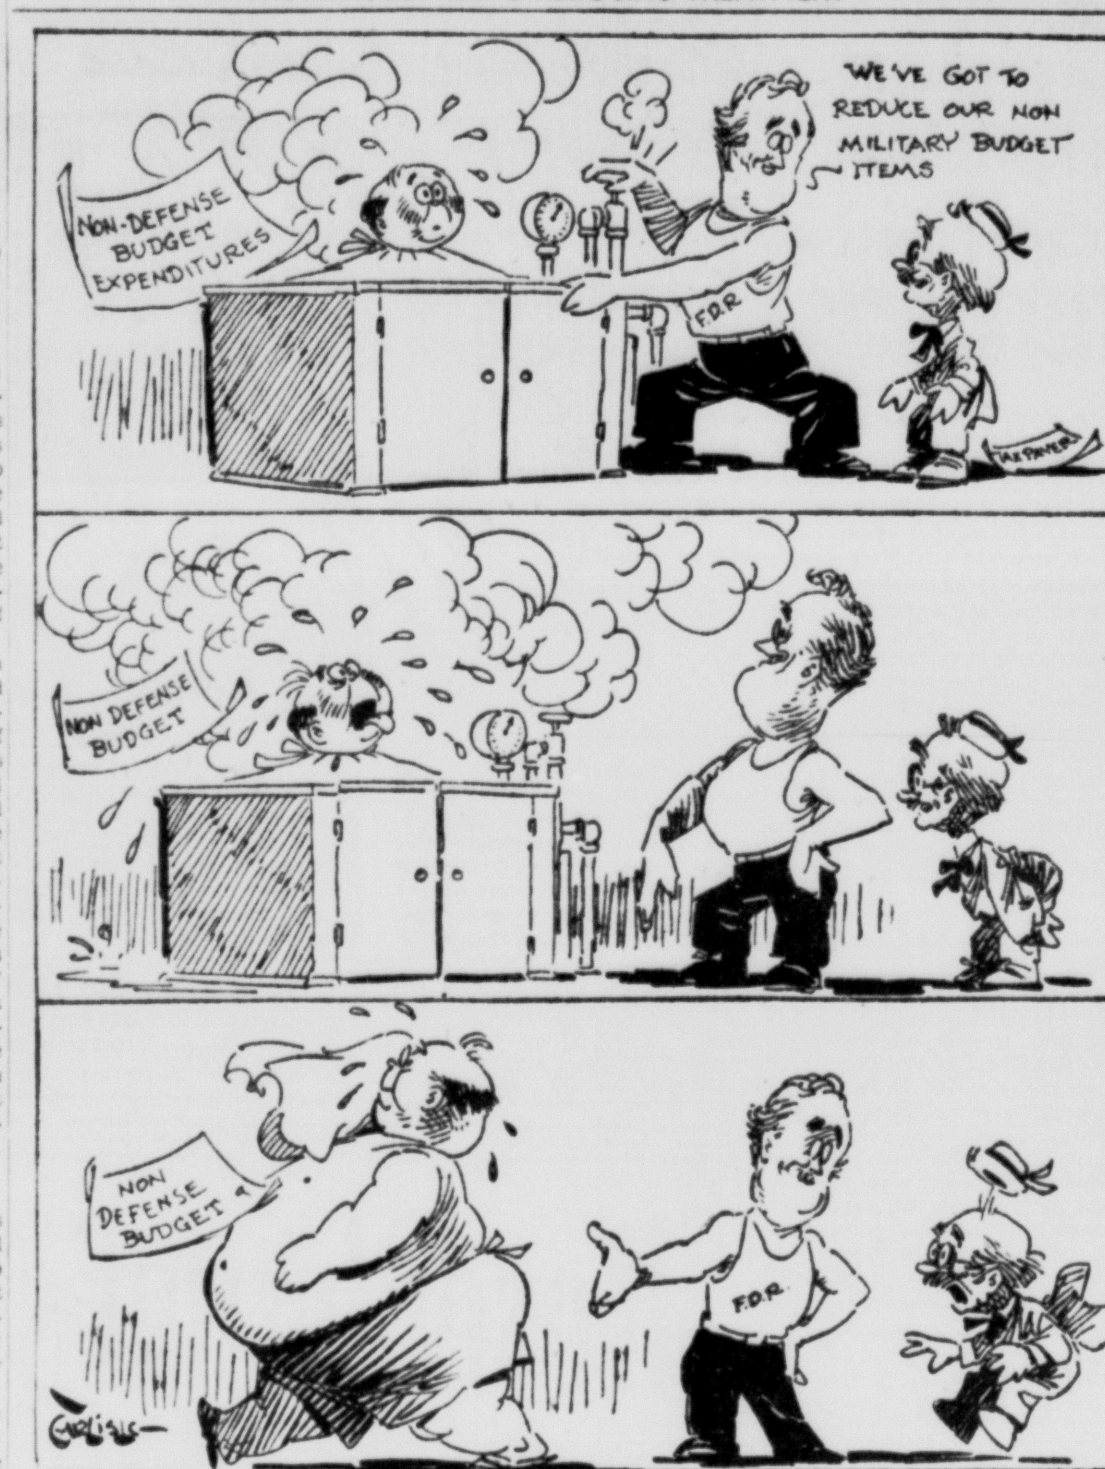

Habit Makes Or Marks
From the Johnstown, Pa. Democrat
"We first make our habits and then our habits make us," said one wise man. "The chains of habit are generally too small to be felt—until they are too strong to be broken," said another. Horace Bushnell was of the opinion that habits are to the soul what the veins and arteries are to the blood—the course in which it goes.

That habit makes or marks these can be no doubt. Nor is there any question that there are bad habits and good habits. Babies do not have any habits. The baby must either acquire habits or have habits forced upon it.

All of which suggests the interesting thought that if children for just one generation could be endowed with the right sort of habits the world would be redeemed from most of its present errors.

Dr. Robert Hutchins, the University of Chicago's youthful president, in a radio speech, opposed any active American military intervention in the European war. "The American people," Hutchins warned, "are about to commit suicide by drifting into a war for which they are morally and intellectually unprepared."

DR. ROOSEVELT'S REDUCING TREATMENT

Latin-American Job Handed Wallace Is Regarded as a Tough Assignment

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Besides attending to the vice-presidential duties that Henry A. Wallace is to be the administration's chief keeper-up of lovely relations among all the Pan-American republics.

Primarily we want our Latin neighbors to go on liking us, here in the United States, as they're beginning to do under the Roosevelt regime, after considerable preceding bad management on our part, and some on theirs, too, perhaps.

There's another thing we also want, though. It's important, from the standpoint of the whole Pan-American outfit, to have the various southern governments on good terms with one another. Independently of us they quarrel among themselves occasionally. It will be principally up to Henry to smooth out any such unpleasantness as may develop.

Our v. p. is delegated to look after this particular job because he's quite a Latin American specialist. He got interested in our neighbors somehow, studied them intensely, learned to speak Spanish (he'll need to acquire Portuguese likewise) and understands the new world's Latin temperament much better than the average Yankin. That's their word for Yankee.

Between spells of vice-presidential duty in the Senate chamber it's expected that Henry will pay visits to the southern continent. He paid one to Mexico not long ago and it wasn't much of a success. A Mexican political faction stoned our embassy while he was there. That wasn't his fault, however. It was due to a row between Mexicans themselves, and we happened to get a bit of the overflow.

He Laughed It Off
It simply was one of those rumpuses mentioned above as always liable to break out to the south of us, which it will be Henry's mission to try to pacify. Indeed, maybe he helped to pacify that one. It subsided anyway. Henry behaved admirably. He just laughed off the embarrassing stoning instead of making a diplomatic incident out of it. That's precisely the right way to get on with those mercurial neighbors of ours.

At this juncture a situation's starting to present itself that may call for plenty of Henry's best guessing.

It appears that the Axis powers are getting from Latin America large quantities of supplies they greatly need to go on with their war against Britain. Britain's Atlantic blockade shuts off the Axis' Latin American source across that ocean, though it's said a little easily portable stuff is transplanted by plane, ferried from the west coast over the Pacific to Japan, thence to Vladivostok, thence through Siberia and European Russia to Germany.

Britain's navy is too busy on the Atlantic and in the Mediterranean to patrol the Pacific, and, since we're supposed not to be in the war, our Pacific fleet can't do it.

To be sure, it's no secret that we're opposed to the supplying of the Axis via the Pacific and Japanese route. And so far as the United States is concerned, we can prevent it by a policy of export embargoes. In fact, to a certain extent, though not wholly, we've done it. But we can't dictate embargoes to the Latin Americas—not without making them perfectly furious and knocking our entire Pan-American good neighborly program into a cocked hat instantly. And the Latin Americas show no signs of an inclination to sloop on any embargoes. It's natural that they should not; they want that outlet for their surpluses.

Well, an alternative's suggested. It's this.

Let U. S. Buy It?
Let the United States buy up all of those Latin American surpluses, leaving nothing to be sold to the Axis aggregation.

Now Latin America does produce a few commodities that we require in almost unlimited quantities—such as tin, coffee, and some miscellaneous tropical stuff. In the main, though, they produce about the same things that we do. So now we're going to buy them out 100 per cent, dumping our purchases onto our domestic market, in competition with Yankee production?

One answer is that we might hand the whole collection over to Britain. Yet if we did we know we never would be paid for it. And the cost of buying out Latin America bodily, on top of defensive preparedness and weapons, munitions, maritime and aviation aid to John Bull, would be terrific. Are we due to feed as well as arm him?

Isn't that a problem for Henry Wallace to chew on?

Some Fairy Tale Stuff
From the Wheeling, W. Va., Intelligencer

Mr. Roosevelt disposes of opponents of his arms loan plan in characteristic fashion. The objection had been raised that under the measure as it now stands, the president could give away the navy, or use it to convoy supplies to Britain. Mr. Roosevelt waives these objections aside as "cow-over-the-moon stuff—Old Mother Hubbard."

We're not so sure. Was it Old Mother Hubbard stuff when Mr. Roosevelt's secretary of war testified that he could conceive of circumstances under which the American navy could be turned over to another nation advantageously?

Was it cow-over-the-moon stuff when Mr. Roosevelt, without either the knowledge or consent of the Congress, actually turned over to England fifty destroyers from the American fleet?

Was it nursery rhyming when the president of the United States undertook to pack the supreme court? Or when he debased the currency? Or when he became the greatest spender of all time after being elected on a promise to practice economy? Or when he was engineering a third-term nomination while indicating to the public that he was not a candidate? Or when he introduced the economy of scarcity idea, or the theory of spending out of depression, or a planned economy, or the substitution of public spending for private investment, etc., etc., etc.?

It can't happen here? It's fairy tale stuff!

Well the cow HAS jumped over the moon, not once but many times since 1932.

Sales Pressure Takes Part Now In Social Events

By EDWIN C. HILL
In the back street of the newspaper, among sweepings and tailings of trade news, there is a little item which jumps out and barks at you, if you pass that way. "How to sell while you dance" is the heading. The Arthur Murray studios announce a special course on "The Art of Salesmanship While Dancing."

It is one of several similar courses on "Social Salesmanship." It is explained that since much selling is now being done at social affairs, there should be "proper training in the correct way to introduce such matters."

We have not gone into this very deeply, but our impression is that a social arbiter would penalize you about ten yards if you flashed any sales talk at a social occasion. In fact, that idea is quite deeply implanted in our manners and modes, and there seems to be something quite revolutionary in this new dance enterprise. It may be in step with the times, though. We're just so-so as a dancer and not even that as a salesman.

Precedent Scarce
There isn't much historical precedent. Salome did a wonderful job of selling, of course, when she danced with Herod. Then there was that little cutie, Mile. Beauvois, who danced with Tillyrand and got him on the dotted line in a trick deal which had been contrived by one of his political enemies. One can foresee strange doings when this new idea gets going. Here's a handsome, trim-rigged beau sabreur, proud of his figure and limber as an eel, coming into the Stork Club on a pair of crutches. Answering sympathetic friends, he says:

"I danced with a girl who had taken one of those dance courses. I didn't know she was working for the Atlantic Orthopedic Equipment Company until I had signed up for these platinum-plated props. Rather nasty, don't you think? That same evening she sold a wooden leg to a pole-vaulter."

Steam Shovel Will Tell
So if papa has been out dancing and you find a steam shovel in the front yard you'll know what happened. Or if mama should produce exhibit a new concrete-mixer.

San Francisco, always an up-and-coming city, was out in front with a somewhat similar idea a few years ago. One Randall Forbes was a high and fast stepper, a social favorite, a super-eligible bachelor, one of the clubbiest men in town, and, all in all, the citizen of highest visibility in those parts.

Late one evening Mr. Forbes, in evening dress as usual, stopped into a chic little speakeasy where folk of his kind gathered. Dallying there was another one-time scion of wealth, also resplendent. It happened that the No. 2 gent had been finding the grass regrettably short. For a long time, he pondered Mr. Forbes' wide expanse of shirt-front. Then he said:

"Dudley, that shirt-front of yours does a heap of circulating among the right people in town. You have there about forty column inches of the most valuable advertising space in America. Now if you will give me an option on the space—"

Mr. Forbes was insulted at first, but finally listened to reason. Society was indulgent at first, when Mr. Forbes got into circulation with his signboard shirt-front, taking it as one of his merry little jokes, as they had the wine-selling campaigns of his predecessor Ned Greenway, who has become the social czar of the town. But one old dowager didn't like the idea and there was an embarrassing contretemps when she bopped Mr. Forbes in the shirt-front with a bowl of caviar. So there is, of course, plenty of precedent for social selling, if not of selling while you dance, or vice versa. There was Harry Lehr, wine-seller and social idol, and there still is Herr von Rippentrop.

But Mr. Murray seems to be the first to decree that the boys must have rhythm. "Tear off a few steps," says the head of the personnel department, examining young job-seekers. It's good news for the jitterbugs, but not so good for Nelson Rockefeller's Committee on Cultural and Commercial Relations with Latin-America. They shoot people down there for mixing up society and business. — Copyright, 1941, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Money Was the Cause of All the World's Trouble, According to Pop, Who Lived To Prove It

By WALLACE K. NORMAN

Jimmy's pop knew about things. And he was one swell guy. When Jimmy asked him a question, his pop gave him the answer, straight from the shoulder, without beating around the bush.

It came about that one Saturday Jimmy's pop took the afternoon off from the little bakery he and Jimmy's mom owned. But pop would be back in time to bake the rolls for the neighborhood's Sunday breakfast. That is, for those in the neighborhood who still traded at Jimmy's bakery. The new, glittering chain-owned bakery shop down the block had cut heavily into the business pop had built up in ten years. But Jimmy's pop was no piker. He knew the way the world was, and he wasn't afraid of things. So he didn't growl or complain.

Pop had taken the afternoon off for a very special reason, Jimmy and he were going to the ball game.

Jimmy's pop considered it.

"Boy!" chorled Jimmy as they got off on foot for the ball park, a good many blocks distant. "I bet we beat those dirty Jints good today!"

"Here's hopin'," his pop replied in some doubt. "But our pitchin's shot. We ain't got the pitchin'."

At the end of the block the pair passed the new bakery, Jimmy eyed the shiny facade thoughtfully.

"Gee, pop," he said, "how'd you like to own all the swell bakeries the chain owns?"

"I wouldn't," his pop told him promptly.

Jimmy's young brow furrowed. "Why wouldn't you like to own 'em all, pop?"

"I wouldn't know what to do with 'em," he replied honestly. "Besides, money isn't everything."

The two arrived at the ball park and found seats in the near-by empty bleachers. The home team was cowering through its infelid practice.

"Boy!" Jimmy thrilled as the second baseman with a dazzling bare-hand stop and lightning throw with the same motion. "Wouldn't it be swell if we owned the ball team, pop? Say, wouldn't we make a pile of money at the world series?"

Jimmy's pop considered it at some length.

"Yeah," he admitted. "It'd be fun, but think of all the worries we'd have if we didn't make the series. Like I told you before —" Jimmy remembered. "I know," he nodded solemnly. "Money isn't everything."

Just the same there was considerable doubt in his young mind. He still wished they owned the ball club.

But when the game was over, Jimmy saw pop's point. The Jints had walloped the home team unmercifully, shutting them out cold. The crowd, extremely small, left the park muttering anger and disgust.

"Tomorrow," Jimmy's pop announced as they prepared for the long walk home, "there won't be anybody here. That's the eighth game they've lost in a row. And I betcha the fella that owns 'em is so sick he can't eat supper."

Jimmy nodded sagely.

"If he'd stuck to his department store, he'd be all right," pop continued. "But he didn't. He wanted to make more money. So he bought a ball club to make it with, and now all he's got is headaches and a sick stomach."

If any doubt remained in Jimmy's mind, it was dispelled the next day. A story in the newspaper admitted that the owner of the team had suddenly been hauled off to a sanitarium on account of a nervous breakdown. The paper didn't go so far as to admit the breakdown was due to the team's failure to draw crowds, but to Jimmy the answer was obvious.

Summer passed. With the coming of autumn a change came over Jimmy's pop. He was worried. Jimmy's mom was worried. Repeatedly, they huddled together in the little flat above the bakery, talking in low tones.

Jimmy was worried, too. So he asked his pop what was wrong and, for the first time, his pop didn't give him the answer straight from the shoulder. Instead, he hinted an evasion and went in and sprawled on the sofa.

The next night Jimmy was at the radio, waiting for his favorite adventure program to come on the air. He was turning the dials idly, when the phone rang in the kitchen. Jimmy's pop, sitting in glum silence by the window, turned in annoyance. Jimmy jumped to his feet.

"I'll get it, pop," he called, skipping to the kitchen.

He picked up the phone. A voice violent with enthusiasm crackled in his ear.

"Hello!" yelled the voice. "Is this Mr. George G. Harvey?"

"Well, no, sir," Jimmy began.

"It's his son, but—"

"What?" cried the voice. "Is this Mr. Harvey? Is it? If it is, I have a check for five hundred dollars for him! This is the Mint of the Air Program!"

Jimmy's mouth flew open. Five hundred dollars! That must be half the money in the world. He looked into the living room where his pop sat staring out the window. Jimmy's young face became grimly defiant. Money again. He'd save his pop a lot of trouble, he had enough trouble as it was.

The word "no" was forming on his lips when he overheard his pop. "And to think that five hundred dollars would save the shop."

"Yes," gulped Jimmy into the phone. "This is it. Just a minute. I'll call my pop."

His father came and heard the good news, but Jimmy couldn't rejoice. Something was wrong in this world; something that would never be put straight. His father—

Ductless Glands Comparatively New Discovery

Tucked Away in Nooks of Body They Look Like Other Organs

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

It is not surprising that the ductless glands were not discovered until comparatively recent times. Even the most painstaking of the older anatomists missed them. They are tucked away in inaccessible nooks of the body and look as if they were part of nearby organs. The first to be noticed and described was the thyroid gland. In countries where enlargement of the thyroid gland—goiter—prevails, it naturally would demand attention. When a function was ascribed to it, the idea was first advanced that it was the seat of the soul.

The thyroid is typical of all the rest of them. They are called "endocrine" or "ductless" glands because they are evidently of glandular structure, yet they pour their secretion directly into the blood stream. The salivary glands, by contrast, pour their secretions by way of their ducts into the mouth cavity, and we can obtain that secretion analyze it and study what it does. About the secretions of the ductless glands we have to infer a good deal more than actually study.

After the thyroid, the pituitary gland hanging from the base of the brain was discovered; and then the adrenals perched one on top of each kidney, then the parathyroids behind the thyroid; and the islets of Langerhans, which are enmeshed in the body of the pancreas, then the reproductive glands were added to the list.

Their Function

The purpose of these glands was obscured too far for a long while because they preside over functions that we take for granted. Growth, for instance. Everybody assumes that we grow because, like Topey, we "just grow." But elements in the body preside over this and the ductless glands secrete those elements. Besides growth, they control general body functions—heat, nutrition, fat distribution—reproduction and the subconscious life processes like blood pressures, intestinal movements, etc.

Being concerned as they are with growth and the appearance of maturity, they naturally work more energetically at certain periods of life than others—their full tides are at adolescence, when the boy or girl is turning into man or woman, and they decline from that peak until senility practically coincides with their extinguishment.

Pituitary Gland

The king gland is the pituitary. It makes one shudder in awe to think what this small gland does to us. The early experiments on the pituitary (about 1911) were done on animals in which it cannot be removed without removing part of the base of the brain also. But in the rat, as in man, a diaphragm separates it from the brain. So the rat is now the experimental animal of choice. If the pituitary be removed from a young rat, it will never grow a fraction of an inch in length or weight again. It will remain a sort of sluggish, contemplative and detached rat, entirely different from its bustling brothers. It may have to be fed. If the pituitary be removed from a mature rat, it begins to be prematurely senile. All the other ductless glands degenerate.

The East would beat him if he fished. So would a lineup with three or four headed by the K in West's hand if the heart suit would not break.

Finally he figured out a play which would work against anything except five or six hearts in one hand, or a singly guarded king bunched with four hearts in the same hand. That was to lead the spade Q, tempting a cover, come up with the A, then lead three high hearts, discarding a diamond on the third round. Of course if one defender now had a single small trump, and was now blank in hearts, he could ruff this, and his partner's trump K would be the setting trick. But that situation was far in the minority compared to other possibilities.

As it turned out, the safety play dropped the K, and so an over-trick was made, whereas the finesse would have beaten the contract. Quite a handsome reward for soundness by a very sound player—Lee Hazen, the New York lawyer who finished second in the last national individual master's championship.

WHAT IS A SAFETY PLAY? PERHAPS the best definition of a safety play is that given by a relatively recent learner of the expression. Here it is: The method of play which will protect you against the largest possible number of different distributions of unlocated cards. It is not necessarily a play in which you deliberately give up a trick in order to guard against the possible loss of more tricks. A more exact definition of that kind of move is "sacrifice play."

South's 5-Clubs call here was an ace-shower, as a mild slam invitation. North, feeling that his hand had a few values he had not quite shown, lifted the bid to small slam, feeling that the play would be a rather close problem, which it was.

West led his diamond K, and South's puzzle confronted him at once. After taking that with the A, he could not afford to lose the first trump round on a finesse, as the setting trick could then be peeled off in diamonds. Any distribution of spades with the K in

Death of Famed Cartoonist's Cat Causes Crusade To Protect Pets

The late Blackie

Sketches by Stanley, for which Blackie posed

ROCKY RIVER, Ohio, Jan. 9.—Blackie, who earned his meat and milk by posing as a model for the famous black cat in Artist Lee W. Stanley's nationally-popular comic cartoon, "The Old Home Town," is dead.

And as a result the cats and dogs and other pets of Rocky River may find themselves afforded much better protection.

Blackie was known to thousands of Rocky River folk. So, when the Stanley cat vanished, the neighborhood organized a search. Blackie was found—shot to death, apparently by boys trying out a gift high-powered air rifle.

The indignation which has swept the community appears to be bringing about more stringent enforcement of ordinances against guns and other weapons dangerous to small animal life in the community.

Meanwhile, Artist Stanley worries over the health of his one remaining cat model—Sugar, a tiger-striped feline, long the buddy and roommate of Blackie. Since Blackie vanished, Sugar has been inconsolable.

Artist Stanley's cartoons, syndicated by the Central Press Association, are appearing in hundreds of leading newspapers, including the Cumberland News.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. B.:—"In a case of tuberculosis, how is a patient determined to be positive or negative if no sputum can be raised for a test? Isn't there a chance that the X-ray can be wrong?"

Answer — A great many people with tuberculosis have neither cough nor sputum. The diagnosis is made on a basis of other symptoms, such as undue fatigue and loss of weight, afternoon fever (a very important sign) characteristic changes on examination of the chest with a stethoscope, positive tuberculin test with the patch test, an X-ray of the chest with a flat plate. It is true that the interpretation of X-ray plates may be wrong if the X-ray examination is made merely with the fluoroscope — that is without taking a print. I believe it is very likely to be wrong. But there is danger in kidding yourself, persuading yourself that the X-ray is wrong.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

Speak without undue contortion of facial muscles to emphasize a word or sound, advises Vicki Viola, radio heroine.

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

If you make faces when you talk, you hurt your beauty and speech too. That's the theory of Vicki Viola, radio actress, who says that the habit of screwing up the face often is an attempt to emphasize a word.

It works the other way, Miss Viola believes, because facial contortions leave a bad impression on the listener and encourage ageing lines at the same time.

If you have the habit, she says, the best way to overcome it is to make yourself read aloud in front of a mirror 10 minutes every day until you achieve an expression that is neither a "dead pan" nor a contortion. She also recommends reading aloud as the best antidote for a monotonous voice.

Vicki Viola ought to know what she is talking about because she has to have a good voice of great flexibility to appear in more than 30 radio programs every week.

She is one of radio's adventure girls, who earn a living expending death in dramas that chill the airwaves. You are surprised to find that her brown eyes are shy and to see that she is so little she almost is fragile.

She has the kind of lovely voice many American girls are seeking. And this is her advice:

"When reading aloud, remember to breathe deeply and rhythmically, and to keep your voice pitched low. Learn to breathe through the nose and to speak on the outgoing breath."

For greater flexibility of the mouth, repeat this sentence: "We wish we were where Willie went."

"Deep breaths while you are talking will give your lungs sufficient air to help prevent a shallow tone. Cue your voice tone to the subject of your conversation."

"Humming, whistling or singing are excellent voice exercises to get range."

To find out if you're breathing properly, she advises: "Place hands on the diaphragm and inhale. The diaphragm should go down. Exhale, and it should go up."

girls give dances, and the director is always glad to get good names to add to their stag list for dances. The Y. M. C. A. is also a good bet. All faiths have similar organizations. You're a business man; why not join some young business men's club? There are dozens of such. In making friendships it's well to make haste slowly.

ED. NOTE: Please don't write for this man's address; Miss Fairfax's column never acts as a go-between among correspondents.

"Going Steady"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going "steady" with a boy for four months. I like him very much, but before I went with him I had many dates with different boys but I'm willing to settle down, as I'm quite fond of this young man.

A boy friend of mine, who lives in another state, writes to me, and I answer his letters as any friend would. But my "steady" doesn't approve of my answering. What really made him angry was the fact that this out-of-town boy asked for a date. Do you think I ought to keep on corresponding with the one who lives out of this city, or do as my "steady" asks?

B. S.

Whether it would be proper to keep on writing to this out-of-town boy or not depends entirely on what you mean by "going steady." With some girls it means a positive engagement. With others, it means a preferred boy friend. In the latter case you will be at liberty to continue that correspondence. But if you really expect to marry this other

But a man like this, who throws aside all responsibilities as husband and father, whose children can only recall him as grossly self-indulgent, a man who never ougates the school-boy weakness for girl-chasing—what insurance is such a man laying up for his old age but contempt?

As for the mother leaving home and trying to make a living for herself and three children, unless she has had special training, that solution of the problem in this era seems almost impossible.

This column will be glad to print any suggestions its readers have to help this lady solve her problem.

His Ideal Girl

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My greatest handicap is loneliness. I'd like to go out with girls of 25 or a little older, but seldom meet the right sort. Those that I meet seem to be cheap "gold-diggers" with no other interests than expensive good times, and have no constructive ideals at all. I don't object to smoking and drinking moderately, though personally I'm a light drinker and smoker myself. I'm sure somewhere there must be the type of girl I'd like to meet—but where?

I'm in my early thirties, a foreigner, but speak English correctly. Am a business man and not bad looking. I dress well and am an exceptional dancer. I have had an excellent education and, though foreign-born, am a good American at heart. How does the average man meet his ideal girl?

To Build $11,000,000 Aircraft Parts Plant

An architect's drawing of an $11,000,000 aircraft parts plant to be built by Thompson Products company in Euclid, a suburb of Cleveland, is shown above. Built under the huge national defense program, the plant will employ 5,000 persons in its 575,000 square feet of floor space.

Best Results in Rearing Child Are Obtained by Making Few Commands

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.
Make few commands; repeat none. If you would get the best results in bringing up a child. But this is a standard no parent will entirely live up to. Nevertheless it is a very desirable goal. As this goal approaches, nagging recedes, obedience waxes, parent-child vexation wanes.

The fewer commands you make, as a rule, the less prone you are to repeat them. The fewer you repeat them, the fewer will be made. The more commands you make the more opportunities and likelihood for disobedience. The more often a command is repeated the less ready is the child to obey.

Why do parents repeat the same command in the same situation so often? "Don't play in the fire" (to the top of three). The child goes on, "Don't play in the fire, I said" (a little louder). The child continues playing in the fire. "If you don't come away from that fire I'll spank you." Still the child is sure the danger point has not been reached. He goes on "Go away from that fire!" the parent yells, making a dash toward the culprit. The youngster goes crying violently. Be Intelligent Parent. An hour or a day later the same child may be playing before the same fire and lingering at it until another volley of commands and threats pour forth. At another time the parent may merely intercept the youngster and keep him from the fire. At still another time there may be a severe spanking while you had made a mistake, in after the second or third warning.

Strangely enough the parent may be highly educated, and otherwise a very intelligent person!

In the event you wish to prove yourself less childish and more grown up and intelligent as a parent, resolve that you are going to discipline yourself rigidly in regard to commands. You are going to be sure to make no unnecessary command. Once you are sure it is necessary you will be certain you have the child's attention and see that he clearly hears the command. If you are forbidding a young child to play with fire, don't repeat the command even once. In case the child does not quit, immediately spank him soundly right then and there. If in an hour or so he plays in the fire again, don't command. Spank him instantly. Give like pain always thereafter for the same offense until he ceases this forbidden act permanently. Allow no exceptions.

If a day or two later he plays in the fire, you will be tempted to warn him, or yell at him, or even to lure him away "so he won't get into trouble." This is bad procedure since it only prolongs the problem, and renders his avoidance of the fire, and obedience to you in other situations less certain. Any act of his warranting a spanking once should bring immediate spanking thereafter without fail; unless, of course, you discovered in the meantime that he had made a mistake, in which went you would tell the child so and ask him to pardon you. As soon as a child will stay where he is put without being tied or held, it is better to assign him to sit in a chair where you can see him for exactly twenty minutes. This type of punishment is better than spanking. Indeed, you can get along without spanking entirely as soon as the chair-sitting punishment can be carried out effectively.

Stocks Close Slightly Higher In Dullest Day Since September

Transfers of Only 357,920 Shares on the Big Board

By FREDERICK GARDNER
NEW YORK, Jan. 27 (AP)—The stock market today managed to emerge with a slight advance for the second time since Jan. 10, but trends were highly irregular.

One or two pivots were up one to two points on meager turnovers. Small fractions also were held by a few steel, rail, utilities, copper, aircraft and specialties. Minor losses, however, were plentiful at the close.

Transfers of 357,920 shares were the smallest for a full session since Sept. 16 last year. They compared with 411,960 Friday.

Du Pont and Allied Chemical were among the widest advances. Minor improvement was retained by Bethlehem Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Pennsylvania, Marshall Field, Anaconda, Kennecott, Boeing, Bendix, American Airlines, Consolidated Edison, International Harvester and Standard Oil of N. J.

On the offside were Republic Steel, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Sears, Roebuck, Montgomery Ward, Westinghouse, General Electric, U. S. Gypsum, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone and N. Y. Central.

In a listless curb plus signs were tacked on Lake Shore, N. J. Zinc, and Pacific Salt. A lower drift was exhibited by American Gas, Aviation & Transportation, Glen Alden Coal and Humboldt Oil. Transactions here were around 84,000 shares versus 99,000 in the preceding five-hour session.

Graduates of CCC, with Background Of Careful Physical, Mental Training, Find Selves Equipped for Draft Army

Civilian Conservation Corps physical training, left, and industrial training, right, of thousands of American boys has done much to prepare them for service in the national defense program, both in industry and in the draft army, center.

By BERT H. DAVIS
Central Press Correspondent

UTICA, N. Y., Jan. 19—Jack is back in camp.

This time he's in an army camp, and Jack is enrolled for a year of training under selective service.

Last time he was in a C. C. C. camp. He didn't know it then—we didn't either—but that one-year trick on a conservation project began to train Jack for what he's doing today.

Between his three-C year of training and the army's duty he's now beginning. Jack had about two years in civil life. That period gave him his first experience in steady employment.

He'd been out of school and out of work a long time before he was recommended for a three-C place. Didn't finish high school. Had no trade, no special vocation skill or experience. Seldom worked more than three weeks at a stretch and never made more than $9 a week.

The family was on relief. Jack was underweight and had a rotten set of teeth.

Physical, Mental Improvement

See what came out of the C. C. C. a year later:

A barrel-chested chap who'd learned to take care of himself among 200 other active young fellows. Thirty pounds heavier now, and every ounce of it muscle and solid meat. Carried himself like the all-around athlete he'd become. Had continued his schooling. Talked maturely. Looked at you with head up and eyes clear and unwavering.

Somebody put Jack to work at a man's pay.

At first he loaded trucks. Then they found he could drive a truck. When the motor was balky he'd make minor repairs to it. The whole vehicle was kept clean and slick.

The boss told Jack to break in the next new man. Then he was a "sub" doing clerical work some afternoons in the shipping office. Yes, he could run office machines. And Jack knew something about felling trees, doing rough carpentry, painting and working in metals. He wasn't a skilled man in such jobs, but he had the fundamentals and he was willing to learn.

They checked on how Jack learned to run a truck. The corps is careful about its selections. Jack had to learn safety, first aid, auto mechanics and the theoretical side of truck maintenance and operation before he ever sat behind the wheel. The camp physician checked again on his health and his vision. A hard road test was given by the foreman. Jack had to serve many weeks on probation, operating a truck on the camp roads before he took his first load into town.

YOUNG MOTHERS SHOULD KNOW

How Father John's Medicine helps COLDS and aids in BODY BUILDING

Little bodies need special care to fight off colds during winter months. For 85 years, thousands of mothers have given their children Father John's Medicine. Its pure, nourishing ingredients are rich in the essential vitamins A and D which not only build resistance to colds, but help develop strong, sturdy bodies.

GOOD FOR ALL THE FAMILY

See what we got from the C. C. C. to start with!

In the indoor classes such as C. C. C. has operated since 1933 Jack and his pals could learn at least the rudiments of photography, radio repair work, welding and blacksmithing, electrical work and drafting. Some of the boys made maps. Almost all of them can read a field map.

Some of us older citizens used to complain that Jack and the other green-clad campers didn't get the manual of arms and "squads right" on a drill field. But the boys' year or two in C. C. C. fitted them for the kind of war that's waged in coveralls with wrenches and oil cans close at hand.

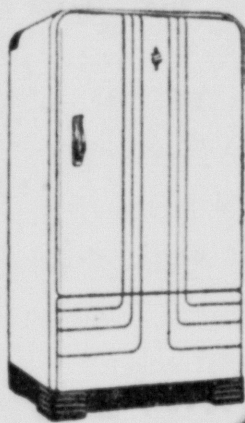

"Off Relief"

A service that has done such a good job in groundwork should be looked over, so we can see if it is getting a fair and square chance to do the best possible work. The American Youth commission of the American Council on Education has just proposed that the C. C. C. be "taken off relief." Owen E. Young, commission chairman, announcing the findings of a four-year study of the corps, believes there should be "no relief or charity stigma connected with this training." He would have the public employment offices throughout the country select the men who go to camp. After a man has been trained along the lines of his strongest possibilities and talents, the Youth commission believes a three-C employment officer should help him find a job and guide him to make good in it.

It would be appropriate for the men who conduct the 1,350 C. C. C. camps now operating to make their suggestions to the American public. As matters now stand, the public would listen attentively. We've learned now that the three-C leadership made an effective beginning on defense fundamentals long before the rest of us guessed what our 1941 needs might be.

Mineral County Jury Convicts Haven Duling of Manslaughter

Dr. R. W. Sollars Taken by Death In Cumberland

Prominent Petersburg Dentist, 51, Succumbs to Heart Attack

PETERSBURG, W. Va., Jan. 27.—Dr. William Rutledge Sollars, prominent Petersburg dentist, died suddenly at 5 o'clock this morning in Cumberland, where he had gone Saturday to make arrangements for funeral of Mrs. Sollars's aunt, Nettie Avia. He was 51.

Dr. Sollars was stricken with a heart attack at 1 Decatur street, where he maintains a dental office in conjunction with his brother-in-law, Dr. John A. Stehley, now in Florida.

A native of Oakland, Md., Dr. Sollars was a son of the late E. E. and Sarah Keller Sollars. After being educated in the public schools of Garrett county, he attended dental school at Philadelphia, Pa., and the University of Tennessee.

Dr. Sollars had been practicing dentistry in Petersburg for the past eight years. Prior to coming here, he had practiced in Cumberland, where he still retained an office with Dr. Stehley and returned there one day each week.

Identified with Republican politics in Grant county, he was a member of the Petersburg town council and active in civic affairs. He was also a member of the Cumberland Dental Society and the Petersburg Kiwanis club.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lois Stehley Sollars; a daughter, Miss Martha C. Sollars; two sons, William R. and John Alexander Sollars; a sister, Mrs. William Phillips, Deer Park, Md.

Martin-Sherman
Miss Audrey Sherman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sherman, Lahmansville, and Cecil Rawlings, Md., son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Martin, Petersburg, were married Saturday by Rev. George E. Baughman, Cumberland. Mr. Martin is employed at the Celanese plant, Cumberland, and after spending a few days on wedding trip to eastern cities, the couple will reside in Cumberland.

Heavy Snowfall
Yesterday about noon, snow started to fall here and continued to until this morning for a total of four inches, making it necessary to stop ploughing of the State Road commission to work continuously. Roads have been slippery, but no serious accidents have been reported.

Buffalo Mills Man Feted on Birthday
L. Shroyer, 77, Honored at Hyndman by Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bruck

HYNDMAN, Pa., Jan. 27.—Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bruck, Hyndman, entertained the latter's father, H. L. Shroyer, Buffalo Mills, at a dinner yesterday in honor of his twenty-seventh birthday.

Those who participated in the festivities were Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Shroyer, Buffalo Mills; Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Carpenter, Oak Ford; E. G. Manges and daughter, Central City; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jones and daughters, Flintstone; Mrs. Edie Rouser and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bruck and children, Hyndman.

Hyndman Personals
Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Clapper, Hyndman, were Sunday guests at their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Rollo A. Clapper, Hyndman. They also visited Jasper, Pa.

Jack Shearer, Warriors Mark, Hyndman, spent the week-end with his mother, Della Shearer.

John Leonard, Washington, D. C., was a week-end guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leonard.

Mrs. James Reckley, Cumberland, was a Sunday guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Harden, Bedford, Pa.

Angelist Ernest E. Muntzing returned to his home at Harrison, Va., last night after bringing conclusion a fifteen-day revival of the Church of the Brethren. Seven new members were added to the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Leonard, Bedford, were week-end guests of Mrs. Della Shearer and Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Leonard.

Miss Jeanne Emerick, Elizabeth, N. J., was home over the week-end in order to attend the Burdett wedding Saturday evening at St. Paul's Lutheran church, Cumberland.

STRIKE HOLDS UP $25,000,000 DEFENSE ORDERS

Office workers, the only employees permitted to enter, are shown passing through a picket line right above, at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing company plant in Milwaukee, Wis. The strike by the C. I. O.-United Automobile Workers' union threw 7,000 men out of work and delayed production of $25,000,000 worth of defense orders for the army and navy. Federal conciliators are working to settle the dispute over closed shop, higher wages and seniority.

'Lefty' Grove Honored by Friends At Turkey Dinner at Lonaconing

Veteran Pitcher Is Feted Before Leaving for Training Camp

LONACONING, Jan. 27.—Robert Moos, "Lefty" Grove, veteran pitcher of the Boston Red Sox of the American League, was honor guest last night at a turkey dinner sponsored by twenty-five of his friends. The dinner was served at the Fremont's Armory, Advocate avenue.

Thomas Holmes, Patrick Doonan and Paul Bowman gave short talks. Grove himself responded and talked on many of his experiences in big time baseball. Following the speeches, cards were played. George Elchhorn acted as toastmaster.

Grove, the oldest active player in the American league, is still a dependable starter for the Boston club. At the beginning of the 1940 season, he needed only fourteen wins to reach a total of 300 victories, but he only succeeded in winning eight games, among which was a two-hit game pitched against the Washington Senators at the beginning of the season. Two flukes hit him of a no-hit game that day.

In starting his seventeenth year as a pitcher in the American league, it is expected that he will win remaining games to reach the 300 mark. During the year 1931, when he won thirty-one games while losing four, he established his best average, .886.

Born at Lonaconing in March 1900, he broke into baseball with the Martinsburg club of the Blue Ridge league after playing sandlot baseball with Midland. At this time, 1920, he pitched about six games. He went to Baltimore the same year and there won twelve while losing two.

After a twenty-six victory season with the Baltimore club in 1924, he was sold to the Philadelphia "A's" for $105,000. His first two years with this club were mediocre, showing none of the greatness that was to come.

Beginning in 1927, the left-handed ace set the pitching world on fire, winning at least twenty games annually for seven straight years. He was later sold to the Boston Red Sox for a reported $125,000 in 1934. After a sore arm forced him off the mound midway in the 1938 season, he surprised observers in 1939 by coming back with the best percentage of junior loop hurlers and compiling one of the best records, winning fifteen and losing four.

The annual dinner last night for the graying left-hander was a gesture of his friends to show him their respect for his pitching ability and to bid him success before leaving for training in February.

Neely May Hold Up Appointments Until Legislative Program Cleared
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 27.—(P)—Except for emergency appointments, it became evident today, Governor Neely's decisions on jobs will be held up until his legislative program is enacted or at least well under way.

Reliable statehouse sources placed only a handful of jobs in the emergency category, among them the post of director of the Unemployment Compensation department.

The Governor, who announced that he plans to deliver his message to the legislature Wednesday at 2:30 p. m., was expected to disclose not later than tomorrow his selection for jobs insurance director to succeed John S. Stump Jr., of Clarksburg, resigned.

Dr. Grover C. Robertson of Charleston, who headed the Roosevelt-Neely-Kilgore campaign organization, was mentioned most prominently as the Governor's probable choice. Stump resigned effective January 13, but stayed on until Saturday at Neely's request.

The persons who predicted that the Governor would give precedence to enactment of his legislative program expressed a belief that it probably would be late in the 1941 session of the legislature before other major appointments are made.

JOHN ALDEN IN NAVY

John M. Alden, of Walpole, Mass., eleventh lineal descendant of the famed John Alden of pilgrim days, takes oath of allegiance in Boston, joining the navy. The original John Alden, as you probably remember, started the line by marrying Priscilla Mullins after her famous "Speak for yourself, John," speech.

Daniel W. Crowe Taken by Death At New Germany

Prominent Garrett County Farmer Dies at 73 after Brief Illness

GRANTSVILLE, Jan. 27.—Daniel Webster Crowe died at his home at New Germany Saturday night after a brief illness. He was 73.

His entire life was spent in the New Germany community, where he was born. Mr. Crowe was one of the substantial citizens of the community and was well known in the county. With the assistance of his son, Stanley Crowe, he successfully operated a large farm near here.

For many years he had been a member of the New Germany Methodist church.

Surviving besides his wife, Mrs. Ada Crowe and their son, Stanley, are two brothers, Robert Crowe and Stewart Crowe, New Germany, and three grandchildren.

Congregational Church Youths To Hold Rally

Christian Endeavor Societies To Mark Anniversary at Frostburg

FROSTBURG, Jan. 27.—The Senior, Junior and Intermediate Christian Endeavor societies of the Congregational church will hold a special meeting Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock when a program in observance of "Christian Endeavor Week," marking the sixtieth anniversary of the world-wide organization will be presented.

The theme of the meeting will be "We Thank Thee, God, for Yesterday." Mrs. Albert Capel, Allegheny county intermediate superintendent, will review the founding of the society sixty years ago, and Mrs. J. F. Zimmerman will review the progress of the organization for the past twenty-five years. The Rev. J. F. Zimmerman will discuss the Christian Endeavor pledge and what it means to young people.

The devotions will be in charge of Roselyn Hughes, Phyllis Walker, James J. Whetstone Jr., Mrs. Edwin Grim and Albert Capel. Miss Rachel Truly will be the soloist, and congregational hymn singing will have a prominent part in the program. The exercises, open to the public, will be preceded by an instrumental prelude.

New Water Rate

John J. Dyer Jr., field auditor of the Maryland Public Service Commission, has granted the Frostburg-Grahamtown Water Company permission to charge a minimum base rate of sixty-five cents effective February 1.

The company purchases water from the city of Frostburg at a rate of forty cents per thousand gallons and has, in addition to water costs, the expense of maintaining water lines and operating costs.

Mr. Dyer, in a letter to Mrs. Maud Harvey, secretary of the water company, explained the minimum charge as follows: "This means that any customer using less than 1,000 gallons per month will pay the minimum charge of sixty-five cents, and all water consumed in excess of 1,000 gallons will be billed at the present rate of sixty-five cents per thousand."

After an investigation, the commission decided that the company, operating in its present basis, was not receiving sufficient revenue to continue business. The present system is a charge of sixty-five cents per 1,000 gallons, but the consumers pay only for the amount registered on meters. This has resulted in some water bills being so low that it did not pay the company to provide the service.

Mr. Dyer stated he will be in months to ascertain the results of his new plan.

Rehearse for Play

Rehearsals are being held for the annual play to be presented by members of the faculty of Beall high school during the first week in March. "Amazon Isle" is the title of the production selected by those comprising the cast.

Edward Pinzel and Miss Elizabeth Hartwick will have the leading parts. Others to whom parts have been assigned are Sally Price, Gertrude Williams, Claire Livesey, Bess Volk, Sue Price, Leo Delaney, John Reed, Marshall Palkin, Lue Sykes and Principal Arthur W. Taylor, who will serve as director.

The play will be presented in the auditorium of the new school, and the proceeds will be used to purchase a curtain for the stage. Last year, the faculty raised nearly $300 for the curtain fund.

Between $700 and $800 will be needed to purchase a new curtain.

Celebrate Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Chidester, 28 Taylor street, celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary yesterday. They were dinner guests at the home of Mr. Chidester's sister, Mrs. Virgil Nixon, 154 Wood street.

Mr. and Mrs. Chidester were married January 26, 1921, at the parsonage of Mt. Zion Welsh Baptist church by the Rev. W. D. Reese, their attendants being Miss Eleanor Hartman and the late Arthur Lemert, who were married a short time later. Mrs. Chidester is the former Miss Maud E. Michaels.

They have four children, Stanley Jr., George, Miss Stella Mae and Don Gene. Mr. Chidester is employed at the Kelly Springfield plant, Cumberland.

Frostburg Briefs

The Allegheny-Garrett Sportsmen's Association will hold an important meeting tomorrow (Tuesday) at 8 o'clock in the city hall, Water street. Frederick Crowe, the newly-elected president, will preside.

Central High Abandonment Rumor Is Blamed on School Board Head

Allegheny County School League Members Challenge Kopp Statement

MT. SAVAGE, Jan. 27.—Ten members of Allegheny County Sunday School League will sign an affidavit to the effect that William A. Gunter, president of the county board of education, was responsible indirectly, at least—for the circulation of rumors that plans were underway to abandon Central high school at Lonaconing, it was announced today.

The rumors had been characterized by School Superintendent Charles L. Kopp as "entirely false." He charged they were circulated by non-Lonaconing citizens as "propaganda for certain ulterior purposes" and said the move had never been contemplated by the board.

Remark Made at Hearing

The ten members who announced they would sign such an affidavit were those who attended a hearing in Baltimore before the state board of education concerning the consolidation program. They declared at a meeting of the School League at Midland last night that Gunter, said at the hearing that before the consolidation program had reached an end, there would be only three high school education centers in the county—Cumberland, Frostburg and in the western end of the county.

Walter E. Rose, of Midland, said that while he could not recall Gunter's mentioning the Lonaconing school, the board president made it clear there would be only one high school in that end of the county.

It was obvious, he said, that either Bruce high or Westernport or Central high would thus be abandoned. Since the Westernport school has recently undergone extensive improvements and since there is said to be no available space for expanding the present Lonaconing institution, Mr. Rose said he and his fellow-delegates received the distinct impression that Bruce would be the consolidated school for that area.

Complaints Made

The affidavit, to be executed by the ten under oath before a notary public, will be sent to Principal Arthur F. Smith of Central, to whom Superintendent Kopp wrote to deny the rumors.

The meeting last night also heard complaints concerning the practical working-out of the consolidation program.

Mrs. Isabelle Adams, Mt. Savage, stated that the Mt. Savage bus, carrying pupils from Beall high to Mt. Savage had been forty minutes late Friday evening, and that pupils were forced to wait on the main highway in the pouring rain for that length of time. The children arriving home were "soaked to the skin," according to Mrs. Adams.

Delegates from the areas affected by the consolidation program complained that no waiting rooms had been erected for the children to stay in before the buses arrived, and that the children were seen to build bonfires near the road to keep warm in freezing weather.

No Waiting Room

Benjamin Fowler reported that a portable building had been erected at Carlos, but that it was not heated. Walter E. Rose stated that he and Nathaniel Dunn, Midland, had been selected as a committee to see Mr. Kopp and get his permission to establish a waiting room for the 200 transported Midland students. Mr. Ross said that Mr. Kopp had agreed to rent the room.

The place, which is located in the Grey building, was repainted, furnished and heated, but after the renovation had been completed the school board refused to rent it, he added. Now, Mr. Ross said, there is no place for the children to wait for the bus.

The league agreed to exert every effort to secure waiting rooms for the children and to see that the bus service is more dependable.

The league gave a vote of thanks to the Midland Redmen for a donation toward league expenses and for the continued use of their hall. (Continued on Page 12, Col. 7)

Defendant Drunk When Truck Hit Car, State Claims

Jury Out 20 Minutes in Probe of Traffic Death of Ernest Bosley

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 27.—A Mineral county Circuit court jury tonight found Haven Duling guilty of manslaughter in the traffic death of Ernest Bosley.

The jury deliberated only twenty minutes before bringing in its verdict at 5:30 p. m.

The case was first on the docket for the January term of court. Twelve others were scheduled to be heard today, but testimony in the Duling case occupied the entire day.

Prosecuting Attorney Joseph E. Hodgson, assisted by former Prosecutor Vernon E. Rankin, whom he defeated at the polls last November, told the jurors in his opening statement that Duling was intoxicated when the truck he was driving struck a car driven by Ernest Bosley, on Allegheny Front mountain the night of May 4, 1940. Bosley was killed in the accident.

Attorneys Herndon R. Athey and H. G. Shores, defended Duling, called a number of witnesses who testified before Judge Robert McV. Drane to the truck driver's sobriety on the night of the wreck.

Babb-Deering
Miss Helen Marie Deering, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Deering, South Main street, Keyser, and Walter Milton Babb, son of Mrs. W. M. Babb, also of Keyser, were married before Judge Robert McV. Drane to the truck driver's sobriety on the night of the wreck.

Bill Would Require Minor Parties To List Their Aims and Principles
CHARLESTON, W. Va., Jan. 27.—(P)—As an aftermath of the American Legion's 1940 campaign to keep the Communist party off the election ballot, the legislature received bills today to require filing of the aims and principles of any minor political party before it seeks certification.

Senator Smith (D-Marion) introduced a bill in the Senate, which he said had American Legion backing. A similar measure was offered the House by Delegate Jones (D-McDowell).

During court hearings which ended in disqualifications of the Communist party from the election, charges were made that persons soliciting signatures to a nominating petition misrepresented its purpose.

The bills introduced would require filing of a platform at least thirty days before petitions are circulated, would insist that circulators of petitions be residents of the magisterial district in which they operate and must carry credentials from county clerks.

The measures would retain the present provision requiring signatures totaling at least one per cent of the vote cast at the last gubernatorial election.

The first proposal of the 1941 session for constitutional amendments also were received, one by Delegate Russek (D-Ohio) to submit an amendment which would permit sale of liquor by the drink and provide for local option by counties.

Gilmore Personals

Three Basketball Games Carded for Tonight

LaSalle-Davis Game Heads List Of Attractions

Allegany Meets Beall High Teams at Campobello in Twin Bill

Fort Hill Boys and Girls Will Entertain Bruce High Teams

Three high school basketball games are scheduled here tonight with Fort Hill and Allegany playing hosts to Western Maryland Inter-scholastic League teams and LaSalle meeting the strong Davis, W. Va. high school eleven.

Beall high of Frostburg will play at Allegany with the girls teams meeting at 7 o'clock and the boys taking the court at 8. At Fort Hill gym the Sentinels will meet Bruce of Westernport in another double-bill with the girls playing at 7 o'clock and the boys at 8 o'clock.

Fort Hill and Allegany are tied for the WMI League leadership and both teams will strive to keep pace with the other by turning in victories.

Two Local Teams Favored

Allegany will be favored to take both contests as the boys despite the fact that they dropped a tough game to Westminster of Johns-town here Saturday night have been doing well with teams in the Tri-State area and had scored five consecutive victories before losing to Westminster. Fort Hill boys and girls are also expected to turn in victories over the Westernport teams.

The LaSalle-Davis game is expected to be the feature attraction of the evening as the two teams have been playing fine ball all season. LaSalle has lost only two games, dropping what is considered as upset decisions to Fort Hill and Tiedgey. The Explorers have won nine games.

Davis has won seven games and lost only two this season, dropping a one point contest to Philippi and being to Davis Alumni by eight points. The Wildcats have been victorious in their last five games. The West Virginians defeated Allegany 34 to 20 and Fort Hill 45-35 and 32-28.

Other WMI League games tonight include Central playing Barton at Lonaconing.

Handley Here Saturday

In the Potomac Valley conference games Bayard will play at Petersburg this afternoon and Thomas will play at Moorefield tonight. In other games Elkins plays at Parsons, Capon Bridge goes to Romney, Cretcheville plays at Marlinton and Jedburgh plays in Berkeley Springs.

After tonight the local teams will be idle until Friday night when Fort Hill and Allegany meet at Campobello in the second intra-city game of the season. If both teams win tonight the WMI leadership will be at stake in Friday night's contest.

Saturday night Handley of Winchester, Va., will play Fort Hill here and LaSalle will go to Altoona, Pa. for a return game.

Chicago May Play Small Midwest Schools in Football This Fall

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (AP)—Authoritative campus sources said tonight that the University of Chicago, which abandoned intercollegiate football in December 1939, has approached several small Midwest schools for 1941 games.

The institution had no football team, as such, last fall but a squad of thirty to forty boys dabbled at six-man football under the supervision of Coach Kyle Anderson, crinmagers were held with several inter college eleven.

Nelson Metcalf, athletic director, declared that any 1941 football plans did not indicate a change in policy by the institution, which still is a member of the Western Conference. "Our football playing again next fall will be of an informal variety," he explained. "We may arrange a few games with nearby schools."

Athletic officials plan to charge to admission to the games.

Keyser Lions Club Boys Group Sponsoring Boxing Show Friday

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 27 — The Keyser Lions Club will sponsor an amateur boxing show Friday night at 8 o'clock in the Armory. The main go will find Carson and Fitzpatrick two boys from Romney, W. Va., tangle.

Officer James Kelley, of the Cumberland Police Boys Club will bring eight amateur sluggers from that city to engage local and sectional talent.

The fights will be refereed by a Cumberland man yet to be selected.

"Dodgers Did It First," Is MacPhail's Battle Cry

NEW YORK, Jan. 27 — There is almost nothing you can do that the Brooklyn Dodgers haven't done already. This applies to everything in the book of baseball tricks from stealing an occupied base to winning twelve straight games without signals.

The boosters of the Detroit team, which captured the American League pennant last year, are beginning to claim a new honor for their club, but it grieves me to report that the Dodgers were there first.

This is the stunt you finish in the second division one year, win the pennant the next, and return to the second division the following year—all in three seasons. The Tigers, faced with the drafting of Hank Greenberg, barred from making trades in their own league, and hobbled by an ancient and creaky infield, have a chance of slipping back into the second division in 1941. And it's a good trick. I don't blame the Tiger fans for pointing to it with civic pride.

But the Dodgers have already done it. In 1919 the year that Cincinnati sneaked in ahead of the New York Giants to win their first pennant, Uncle Wilbert Robinson's rogues from Brooklyn landed in the second division. The next year, 1920, with Grimes, Cadore, Smith, Marquard, Kilduff, Olson, Wheat, Myers, Johnson, and the rest, the Dodgers copped the flag. In 1921, sure enough, they were back in the second division.

Tiger Claims Denounced

As a matter of local prestige, the people of Brooklyn do not care to hear it said that Detroit will be the first big league club to perform this difficult feat. All over red hook and Canardie and Queens the patriots rise to denounce the claims of the upstart Tigers.

And if Detroiters persist in foisting their claims on the public, the brain of Brooklyn, Leland Stanford MacPhail in person, will hurl the scroll of history in their faces. No Brooklyn prerogative will ever be challenged while L. S. MacPhail is at the helm.

"Brooklyn did it first!" is the battle cry of L. S. MacPhail. "No matter how wrong it was, Brooklyn did it."

Of course, there is some possibility that Detroit will not be able to get back to the second division as rapidly as the Tiger supporters boast. The third year in this cycle is always the hardest. Many cynics feel that the Tigers will be lucky to sink as low as the third place.

In fact, Hank Greenberg, the ace who has been tapped for the United States Army, believes that Detroit will have trouble losing the pennant.

"To hear 'em tell it," says Mr. Greenberg, "our club is washed up. The way I look at it, the Tigers will be at least as strong as they were last year, whether I play or not."

He's Worth Listening To

This statement is open to doubt, and you can trace some of Mr. Greenberg's remarks to loyalty, but still, he is a shrewd athlete and worth listening to.

"If I'm drafted," Hankus was saying—this was before his drafting became a virtual certainty—"They may not be able to find a fellow who will drive in as many runs, but the club has good outfielders to burn, and the chances are we won't need quite as many runs as we scored last season. I look for better pitching."

John Gonska showed you what he could do in the World Series. He made monkeys of the Cincinnati hitters. And Hal Newhouse is just as good. With Newsum and Rowe pacing the staff, and the young pitchers pining plenty of games, we won't need as much power—though we'll still have plenty of that. Any team with Higgins, York, Campbell, Gehring, and McCoskey is bound to slug.

"What puzzles me is the way people knock our infield. You think Gehring is washed up? You don't know him. Charlie played most of last season with a bad back. He'll be all over that in 1941, and you'll see the old Gehring again, playing as good a second base as anybody in baseball—and hitting the apple, too."

"I think we'll win it again," said Mr. Greenberg firmly, "by more than we won it last season."

That may be. Win or lose, the Tigers will have their troubles getting back into the second division. It's not as easy as it looks, and until the Detroit team does it, the Dodgers of 1919-20-21 are still the down-up-down champions of the world.

Lou Nova Faces Tonsil Operation

MADISON, Wis., Jan. 27 (AP)—Lou Nova, heavyweight boxer, has entered Wisconsin General hospital to undergo a tonsil operation tomorrow.

Nova, who has been visiting at the home of Allan Wals, University of Wisconsin crew coach, was stricken with a cold Friday and sent to the hospital for a checkup. Doctors advised him to have an infected tonsil stub removed.

No Havana Games

The Detroit Tigers rejected an offer for three exhibition games with the Reds at Havana because Owner Briggs feared it would produce more high jinks and shenanigans than baseball.

HERE'S JOE'S NEXT HEAVY FOE

Red Burman

Protege of Jack Dempsey, the former champ, Red Burman gets a shot at Joe Louis' title in a championship bout in New York, Friday, Jan. 31. Burman has been fighting for seven years. The bout is the first of several for Louis prior to his title defense with Billy Conn next summer.

CHICAGO, Jan. 27 (AP)—George H. Sisler of St. Louis, one of baseball's most brilliant first basemen of all time, was re-appointed commissioner of semi-pro baseball today for a five-year term.

Broadbudd Star Near Luisetti's Record

Philippi, W. Va., Jan. 27.—With but 11 games of the regular season, already in the record books, lanky Kenneth Griffith, star forward at Alderson-Broadbudd needs but 43 more points to eclipse the all-time four-year scoring record held by Hank Luisetti, former Stanford great. His 245 points already marked up, gives him an average of 23 points per contest, and at his present rate, three more contests should find him in the "hall of fame."

His scoring this season has been from one extreme to the other, counting 34 points against Toledo DeSales, for his high, while being held to five markers against Davis-Elkins in the first contest, although he came back to count 24 in the second of the two game series. He made 34 Saturday night against Salem. Griffith scored 15 field goals and four fouls Saturday. He has 96 fielders to his credit for the season and has converted 53 free tosses.

Ferrell Sees Good Season for Washington

Says Team May Finish Higher Than Fourth

Club Needs Pitching To Come Through Veteran Catcher Declares

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 27.—Rick Ferrell, veteran Washington catcher, said today the Senators may finish the coming season in better than fourth place if the pitching comes up to his expectations.

Ferrell predicted a close fight between Cleveland and New York for the pennant with Boston and Detroit threatening Washington, he declared, will be battling for fourth place but may go even higher if the team's pitching comes through.

"We have three pitchers, Ken Chase, Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson, who are potential twenty-game winners," he said.

Ferrell praised Hudson, the youngest who won seventeen games as a freshman last season.

"He's got poise and control," explained Rick, "a good change of pace and a tricky curve. Furthermore, he learns fast. You tell him a batter's weakness once and he remembers it. He ought to have a big year this season."

As for Leonard, Ferrell declared the veteran knuckle ball pitcher was as good as ever and that his 1939 record was spoiled by tough luck. "That knuckler of his comes at a batter like a butterfly," he said. "You don't know which way it's coming to break and neither does Dutch. And just when they get set to tee off on it, Leonard shoots in a fast one. He's tricky, that fellow."

NEW COACHING JOB

Tom Stidham

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—There is a childish "my dad can lick you" element in the Cleveland-Detroit argument over whether Bob Feller or Buck Newsom gets the biggest paycheck, and the chances are the other club owners aren't too much pleased over this display of pride.

In the first place, the Cleveland and Detroit officials are smearing up the traditional picture of club owners; a picture which shows them slowly drowning in a sea of red ink, with only their spirit of sportsmanship enabling them to keep up at all.

In the second place this boasting of the fat salaries paid is liable to put ideas into the heads of other athletes whose salary is practically a relief check compared with what Feller and Newsom draw. They will figure that if clubs can put out that kind of money, and brag about it, the owners can't be quite as close to patched pants as they let on, and maybe it might be a ripe time to ask for a raise.

That Newsom and Feller are worth what they are being paid there seems to be no question. Pitchers have an edge in salary arguments over other players, as their value in dollars and cents at the gate can be fairly well estimated.

For instance, when the attendance makes a hot-foot leap every time Feller or Newsom is advertised as the pitcher of the day, the owners know it is no coincidence, and they can pretty accurately figure how much this increased attendance means in dollars and cents over a season.

Babe Ruth's salary in his prime would make Newsom and Feller seem to be playing for penny-ante stakes, and Ruth was not a pitcher. Or rather, he wasn't a pitcher at the time, although he had been plenty of pitcher before that.

However, Ruth can be left out of all comparisons, as he was a man alone. There was no question but that his drawing power was felt every day of the season. A few others, like Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio, have received upper-case money, but an evident drawing power was a factor in each case.

But the average infielder or outfielder or catcher would have a hard time proving just how much he meant at the gate, and after all, that's the real yardstick of a player's value. He might bat .360, but if his presence in or absence from the lineup didn't make the difference of one bleacher admission, the bosses would have a club to swing over his head if he demanded more money.

Naturally a club owner trying to build a winning team would look kindly toward a better-than-average player even though the average wasn't an individual drawing card. The owner would figure that a contending club would draw better than a club going nowhere in particular, and the better-than-average player might be worth more money because he helped make the club a contender.

But all in all, the good, second-year player who shows attendance in several degrees below normal hasn't much of an argument when he sends back his contract marked "insufficient funds." The club owner can ask: "all right, just show me where your presence in the lineup means more dollars and cents to me?"

Even a Gallup poll couldn't answer that one.

Frnk Signs To Coach Tulsa For Next 4 Years

FRANK, thirty-seven-year-old native Texan and exponent of the Southwestern style of wide-open football, has signed a four-year contract as athletic director and head football coach at the University of Tulsa.

Frnk, pronounced "Frank," comes from Temple University, of Philadelphia, where he was first assistant to Ray Morrison. His letter of recommendation from his former boss describes him as "the best young football coach in America."

Celanese To Meet Keyser Blue Jays Here Tonight

Celanese Local 1874 and the Keyser Blue Jays will clash here tonight at 9 o'clock on the Central Y. M. C. A. court in an Interstate Basketball League with Keyser favored to win the contest.

In league games the Celanese team has split even, being beaten by the Cumberland Dragons and winning from Sam's Candy Kitchen. The Blue Jays are tied with the Keyser Pepsi-Colas for first place. They walloped the Dragons 61 to 29 in their only game in league competition.

Tonight's game was originally scheduled for last Tuesday but was postponed due to the death of Milton Sively's father. Sively is a forward on the Blue Jay team.

American League Has Quartet of Iron Men

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Four American League players took part in every game during the 1940 campaign. They were First Baseman York, of Detroit; First Baseman Siebert, of Philadelphia; Outfielder Case, of Washington; and Shortstop Boudreau, of Cleveland. Three of those four came through unscathed. Case was a cripple when the 1939 season ended. Siebert had the reputation of being brittle but declared a year ago he was going to show Connie Mack he was not. Boudreau knew two weeks before the season ended he was threatened with appendicitis but insisted on waiting until the close of the pennant race to have the necessary operation.

Those to miss only one game were Joe Kuhel, of Chicago; Joe Gordon and Babe Dahlgren, of New York; Bob Kennedy, of the White Sox; and Ken Keltner, of the Indians. Each missed two games. Bobby Doerr, of Boston, was absent three games; Roger Cramer, four; George McQuinn, of the Browns, five and Rip Radcliff, six.

The end of the first half race in the Knights of Pythias Mixed League, won by the Seniors last week, was celebrated by a chicken dinner at Shober's Tavern.

The Seniors and Knights finished the dash tied for first place and in the regular match between the teams at the Roxy, the Seniors finished on top by 83 pins to capture the crown. In the same match, the Seniors won three games to take the runnerup berth in the home stretch.

The Esquires remained unbeaten in the current campaign by blanking the Chiefs. In the other encounter, the Juniors scored a sweep victory over the Pages.

The loop's bowlers were commended for their splendid attendance and cooperation by President Dave Smith, who acted as toastmaster at the dinner. Secretary George Kiefer, Harry Cloni and Harold Fishell also made short talks. Charles Smith was elected vice president, succeeding Britton Shaffer.

Attending the affair were Mrs. Ethel Lovenstein, Mrs. Anna Kirby, Mrs. Elizabeth Murphy, Mrs. Irma Moore, Mrs. Evelyn Llewellyn, Mrs. Irene Miller, Mrs. Ruth Kiefer, Mrs. Grace Frost, Mrs. Mae Arbogast, Mrs. Geneva Blizard, Mrs. Irene Woy, Mrs. Ann Drenning, Mrs. Emma Rudiger, Miss Eileen Barb, Mrs. Emily Miller, Mrs. Ada Twigg, Mrs. Lottie Richards, Mrs. Mabel Cline, Mrs. Maria Clark, Mrs. Eva Blake, Miss Beatrice Rudiger, Mrs. Frieda Shipway, Glenn Moore, Lester Murphy, Clarence Frost, Robert Llewellyn, Harold Fishell, George Kiefer, Dave Smith, Paul Kiefer, Fred Rudiger, Harry Cloni, Claude Cline, John McKee, Carl Smith, James Conway, Mardie Rudiger, Kenneth Mahaney and Emmitt Shipway. MAXIE THE PARACHUTIST

Former heavyweight champion Max Schmeling is pictured in his uniform as a member of Germany's parachute troops. Max was denied an army furlough for defense of his European title recently because parachuting demands "extreme exertion."

Schmeling Now a Nazi Parachute Jumper Is Anxious To Fight Again

Former Champion Indicates He Would Like Another Crack at Louis

By ANGUS THURMER
BERLIN, Jan. 27.—Soldier M. Schmeling still has a pretty high regard for the boxing ability of Max Schmeling, former world heavyweight champion.

Though he was stopped by Champion Joe Louis in one round the last time they met, he would concede the Brown Bomber nothing more today than that "he's still the best man you've got over there."

May Fight Again

Schmeling, though now a "fallschirmjäger" (parachute trooper), hasn't quit the ring. While he pointed out there was no chance of his making another trip to the United States at present, there still is a possibility he may defend his European heavyweight title.

It was with this in mind that Schmeling, a guest of the Berlin stadium together with some twenty other parachute troopers, sat in on yesterday's battle between Walter Neusel and Adolf Heuser. Max, who beat Neusel in nine rounds in 1934 and stopped Heuser in seventy-two seconds in 1939, studied the two closely as Neusel slugged his way to victory, explaining he might meet one or the other on some future date.

"It's not decided definitely yet," said Dr. Max, "whether the army will give me furlough to train." Under German boxing rules, Schmeling must defend the title within a specified time or give it up.

He would say little about his activities as a parachute trooper beyond the statement that "it takes just as much training as it does to be a boxer." To all further questions he simply smiled and said, "you better not ask me about that."

Belittles Leg Injury

The Black Uhlan belittled the leg injury he received while training for parachute jumping. He moved around as spryly as he ever did in the ring. Before the Neusel-Heuser bout began, the crowd spotted Schmeling and besieged him for autographs. Then a spotlight picked out the ex-champion and the loudspeaker blared for silence as he came up to the ring to be introduced.

"We have the pleasure to introduce the former world champion, Max Schmeling, who is a parachute trooper volunteer," said the announcer. Max trim and broad-shouldered, flicked his heels in true Prussian fashion, and snapped out a Nazi salute to the four sides of the hall. He was dressed in civilian clothes, and one fan shouted:

"Where's that uniform?"

The crowd laughed good-naturedly. Then it was "Unter Max" (our Max) as he shook hands with Neusel, patted Heuser on the head, and went back to his comrades-in-arms to watch the fight.

Two-Year Contract Signed by Thompson

Cincinnati, Jan. 27.—Gene Thompson, who as a sophomore pitched the Cincinnati Reds to 16 victories toward their world championship, agreed today to a two-year contract. Terms were undisclosed, but there were indications he received a raise. Thompson won 13 and lost five during his freshman year and lost nine games in 1940.

Wayne Amber, from Jersey City, returned a signed contract, twenty-first Red to enter the fold.

Red Cross Urged To Forget Peace Time Slogans

Three Fold Challenge Faces Organization, Chapter Is Told

Seventy-five per cent of the help furnished to war torn Europe is being given by the American Red Cross while the other twenty-five per cent is made up by 300 other organizations.

This information was imparted last evening at the annual meeting of Allegheny County Chapter, in the Public Safety building, by Mrs. Lee W. Witherup, chapter chairman, and Mrs. Louise P. Coulehan, executive secretary, who gave enlightening reports on their recent conference in Baltimore with Walter Davidson, executive of the American National Red Cross.

Defense Is Stressed

Directors and county officers were told that the Red Cross has been resting on its laurels since 1917 and were advised to forget peace time slogans in favor of the national defense program.

It was pointed out that a three-fold challenge facing the Red Cross today comprised:

1. Meeting responsibilities arising from the national defense program.
2. In continuing at full strength domestic services that have become an integral part of the community and national life.
3. In maintaining a strong organization to discharge the international obligations of alleviating the sufferings of war.

Full speed ahead was urged by the two county chapter officials in carrying on war relief such as the making of garments and the preparation of dressings. Volunteer nurses, especially young graduate nurses, are requested to enroll as soon as possible with Miss Gladys LaRue, special representative or key nurse of the Red Cross Nursing Service here.

To Enlarge Committees

Frederick A. Puderbaugh, chairman of the disaster committee, said that he had revitalized his committee and made replacements to fill the vacancies caused by several members answering the call to the colors. He also stated that his committees will be enlarged so as to be fully prepared in case of any emergency.

Dr. Arthur P. Dixon, treasurer of the chapter, reported that the county organization has a balance of $6,440 on hand.

Reports of the various chairmen were read and approved.

Out of $10,748.04 raised in the county for war relief in 1940, fifteen per cent or $1,612.21 remained in the county to purchase war relief materials. County branches raised $2,527.53.

The annual Roll Call report showed that 6,301 members were enrolled and a total of $7,847.51 was raised. Of this amount national headquarters received $3,222.13, county branches $987.18 and Cumberland $3,637.83.

Those attending the meeting were Miss Eleanor Sloan, Lonaconing; the Rev. and Mrs. Norris Line-weaver, Mrs. Clarence Thomas, Miss Lilian Feldman and Mrs. Joseph Repphann, all of Eckhart; Mrs. Carl White, Mrs. William Somerville, Mrs. A. M. Lichtenstein, home hygiene chairman; Frederick A. Puderbaugh, chairman of the disaster committee; Karl G. Perry, first aid chairman; Dr. Arthur P. Dixon, treasurer; Mrs. Lee W. Witherup and Mrs. Louise P. Coulehan.

Only One Paid Worker

In answer to numerous queries in regard to the amount of salary received by officers of the chapter, Mrs. Witherup announced that the work of all officers and chairmen is voluntary and the only paid member of the organization is the executive secretary, who has charge of the Red Cross office here.

Marlyn R. Burke Forfeits Bond on Traffic Violation

Marlyn R. Burke, of 900 Oldtown road, forfeited $575 bond yesterday in trial magistrates' court on a charge of failing to keep to the right-center of the highway. He was arrested by Officer William E. Hopkins, state police, January 19 on the National pike.

Drivers and Astor Cab Company Expect To Sign Contract Today

Proposed Agreement Will Be Submitted To Employees This Morning

The stage was set last night for the ratification of what will be the first union contract between a cab company and the Transport Workers Union in the history of Maryland.

In all probability the management of the Astor Cab Company and committeemen representing the drivers will sign an agreement this morning in the Clark Keating Building. It was announced last night.

Fred Jenkins, president of the Astor Cab Company, said he was "almost positive" negotiations between the company and the drivers,

SNOW BLANKETS TREES—Trees in Constitution park bowed under the weight of Cumberland's biggest snowfall of the season yesterday while enthusiastic youngsters made the most of the situation and got out and wallowed in the snow. The NEWS cameraman, in search of snow art, traveled to the park yesterday afternoon and shot this picture. The picnic tables among the trees, loaded down with food every Sunday last summer, yesterday were loaded down with almost six inches of snow.

Certain Streets Are Roped Off For Sledding

Children Asked Not To Use Other Streets For Coasting Purposes

Sylvan and Grand avenues, Gehart drive and Oak, Marshall, Cecilia and Chase streets have been roped off for sledding by the police department.

Open for sledding between 8 and 9 p. m., Chief Oscar A. Everman said the sections of the streets to be used were to be roped off and lanterns placed.

Children are warned by Chief Everman not to use other streets for sledding.

All motorists are requested to drive with extreme care.

Research by the National Safety Council's Committee on winter driving hazards has proved that inadequate traction and reduced visibility are the two primary dangers. Chief Everman said "All drivers should check condition of such vital equipment as tire chains, lights, windshield wipers and defrosters, to be sure they are ready for use when needed in bad weather."

Chief Everman said Cumberland drivers should prepare for at least another month of winter hazards.

Four Men Enlist In Army at Local Recruiting Station

Sgt. Clarence Biehn, local Army recruiter, announced yesterday that four men enlisted at the local station Saturday and yesterday. Two of the men, Carl Liller, Jr., of Mt. Lake Park, and Emory William Adams, Jr. Second street, Oakland, were assigned to the Air Corps. Lowry Field, Colorado. A high school education is necessary for this assignment.

Cleodius Corbin of Romney, W. Va., enlisted for the Medical Department, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., and Marion Law Burton, Box 304, Kitzmiller, for the Medical Department. One Thousand Three Hundred and Twentieth Service Unit, Fort Belvoir, Va.

They were directed to assemble (Continued on Page 13, Col. 7)

Prizes Are Given Salvation Army Sunday School Students

Ninety prizes were given out last night at a special Young People's Annual meeting of the two Sunday schools of The Salvation Army. The meeting was held at the Citadel on North Mechanic street, and Lloyd Rawlings, a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board was the guest speaker and distributed the prizes.

Prizes consisted of gold cross and crown pins, Bibles, New Testaments, and religious books, and were given as first, second, and third prizes for faithful attendance during the past year. No one was entitled to a prize who had less than forty credits for attendance. 132 persons from the two schools were in attendance.

SS. Peter and Paul Pays 64 Per Cent Of Debt on School

$85,000 of $132,000 Debt Is Raised over Period of Seven Years

Sixty-four per cent of an original debt of $132,000 brought about by the building of SS. Peter and Paul school, Fayette street, has been paid off, according to the annual financial statement for 1940 issued by SS. Peter and Paul Catholic church. The school was opened September 14, 1931.

The report shows that the sum of $16,975 was paid last year toward wiping out the debt and the amount yet remaining to be paid is $47,000. A total of $85,000 has been paid on the new school debt over a period of seven years, the Rev. Father Boniface Weckman, O.F.M., Cap. rector, said.

Total receipts of the church for last year were $44,835.52 while expenses were $44,218.77, leaving a balance of $616.75 as of January 1, 1941. The balance on January 1, 1940 was $417.90.

Construction Worker Suffers Hand Injury

An employee of the Hazlewood Construction Company, Verden Shaffer, of Potomac Park, suffered abrasions of the right hand yesterday morning when his hand was caught between the guard and drum of a cement mixer.

The accident occurred at the B & O railroad shops where the Hazlewood firm is constructing an addition to the engine stalls in the roundhouse.

After treatment at Memorial hospital he was released.

All Tickets Must Carry the Proper Tax Markings

Printers Asked To Co-operate with Internal Revenue Collector

Due to the fact that tickets for various affairs are being sold minus the proper tax markings printed or stamped thereon, M. H. Magruder, collector for the Internal Revenue Service, Baltimore, advises printers that it is their duty to furnish the collector's office with a sample of all tickets showing price paid of more than twenty cents, giving the name and address of the person to whom the tickets are furnished.

Requirement Ignored

While this requirement became effective July 1, 1940, it is being ignored, Magruder reports.

Where tickets or cards of admission to any place for admission to which a charge of twenty cents or more, are printed, manufactured, or sold by any person, it shall be the duty of the printers to comply with the following requirements:

1. The price (exclusive of the tax to be paid by the person paying for admission) at which every ticket or card is sold must be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped or written on that part of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management of the place for which it is valid for admission. For administrative purposes it is necessary to show not only the selling price but also:
2. The tax.
3. The total of the price and federal tax.

Rate of Taxation

The rate of taxation is one cent for each ten cents or fraction thereof of the amount paid where the price paid for admission is in excess of twenty cents.

As no tax is imposed on the price paid for admission of less than twenty-one cents, it is only necessary that the price of such tickets be shown.

Where admissions are exempt on other grounds, application must be made to the Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, within a reasonable time in advance of the date upon which the printing of tickets is contemplated. No organization is automatically exempt.

Those in doubt as to the proper markings on tickets of admission are advised to consult Richard J. Stakem, deputy collector, United States Bureau of Internal Revenue, post office building, Pershing street.

Kiwanians To Hear Prof. and Mrs. Matteson In Musical Program

Prof. Maurice J. Matteson and Mrs. Matteson, of the faculty of Frostburg State Teachers college, will present a musical program Thursday, January 30, at the regular dinner meeting of the Kiwanis club at 12:15 p. m. in the Fort Cumberland hotel.

The program will deal with folk music and will consist of talks by Prof. Matteson illustrated by actual songs with Mrs. Matteson as accompanist.

Both Prof. and Mrs. Matteson are excellent musicians and have done much to raise the standard of musical life in Allegheny county.

Local Employment Service Makes 2,900 Placements

Unemployment Figures Show Decrease of 6,014 Here in Three Years

The Cumberland office of the Maryland State Employment Service, placed a total of 2,900 persons in private industry in 1940, the highest figure attained here since the office came under the state supervision in 1938, according to Frederick Z. Hetzel, manager.

In 1939, the records show that 2,605 placements were made while the preceding year jobs were found for 1,730 persons.

Placements in 1940 were in five classifications, as follows:

- Commercial and professional — 412 placements, of which 116 were permanent jobs.
- Skilled trades — 917 placements; 452 permanent jobs.
- Laborers — 615 placements; 126 permanent jobs.
- Domestics — 637 placements; 279 permanent jobs.
- Institutional and maintenance — 309 placements; 167 permanent jobs.

The local office's biggest month in the year was November when 304 persons were placed in private industry while the low figure was 211 in June.

In the matter of total number of persons given employment in 1940, the Cumberland office topped the twelve other offices in the state outside of Baltimore city. Trailing Cumberland's figure of 2,900 was Frederick with 2,267. Hagerstown made 1,399 placements.

The active file which contains the names of those seeking employment was 3,611 persons at the local office as of January 31, 1940. This represents a drop of 6,014 since 1938 when the names of 9,625 persons appeared on the local files. The active file contained 4,044 names in 1939.

Local Youth Is In Flying School

S. E. Enfield, Jr., Expects To Complete Course in Alabama Next Week

S. E. Enfield, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. S. E. Enfield, 845 Mt. Royal avenue, expects to graduate next week from the Air Corps Basic Flying School, Montgomery, Alabama.

Prior to his arrival at the Basic Flying School he entered the Air Corps at the Air Corps Primary Training School, Tuscaloosa, Alabama, last September 9. He obtained six hours on the air and made his solo there on October 2.

Enfield arrived at the Basic Flying School on November 26, as a member of Class 41-C which is expected to graduate to the Advanced Flying School, Maxwell Field, Ala. about February 3 for the final stage in their training.

According to a report received from Alabama, Cadet Enfield has indicated his desire to be assigned to bombardment organizations upon completion of his training at the Advanced Training School. Lieut. G. L. Stubbs, Air Corps, has been assigned as his instructor and has supervised his flying through ten hours of basic training flying.

Enfield received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Duke University last June.

Fireworks Bill Is Approved by U. S. Chamber of Commerce

The underlying principles of the bill now before the House of Delegates regulating the sale and use of fireworks today had been approved by the policy of the chamber of commerce of the United States, H. W. Smith, secretary of the Cumberland chamber, said yesterday.

The chamber pointed out that according to the Maryland Society for the Prevention of Blindness the tragic and unnecessary casualties resulting from the sale and use of fireworks in Maryland during the past four years resulted in four fatalities and 1,200 injuries which were serious enough to require medical attention or hospitalization.

Of the four fatal accidents, three were children and in the injured class were 800 children under 16 years of age. Aside from the loss of life and injuries due to fireworks, statistics also show there is a substantial loss, the chamber said.

Trades Council Will Install Officers Here Tonight at 8 O'Clock

Officers of the Allegheny Trades Council will be installed at a meeting at 8 o'clock tonight at the council hall, 63 Baltimore street.

Commissioner—Miss Vivian V. She has been a practicing attorney thirteen years and vice-president of the Montgomery County Bar association.

Maternal advice on the methods a girl should employ to snare the wary male to the contrary, it is the man who really wants a permanent home and the security of marriage.

This statement will probably be a surprise to Chatter readers as for years and years it has been an accepted theory that the girl usually tries to "land" the man.

However, according to a cedar chest manufacturer, the male of the species is the one who really wants to get married. A survey recently made on who buys cedar chests and why discloses the fact that 45.1 per cent — almost half of the total purchases of cedar hope chests — were made by men for themselves or for their sweethearts. Matrimonially minded young women bought 21.4 per cent of the hope chests sold.

Parents of American girls are becoming more and more dowry conscious, the survey indicates. For ten per cent of the hope chests were purchased by parents for their daughters.

With completion of the All-American-highway, reaching from Alaska to Argentina, looming as a possibility in the near future, plans are under consideration for the establishment of an inter-American federation of motor clubs. F. H. Rockwell, of the Western Maryland Automobile Club was advised yesterday by A. A. A. headquarters in Washington, D. C.

"Suggestion for such a consolidation was made at last fall's annual meeting of the A. A. A. by Senor Luis Montes de Oca, president of the Asociacion Mexicana Automovilistica Rockwell said.

Active motor clubs are now in operation throughout most of the American nations. These clubs are affiliated with A. A. A. clubs through the two big international touring organizations — the International Touring Alliance, but it is believed that a closer tie-up through an inter-American federation is desirable for handling motor travel among the American nations.

Such an international motor club federation would have four major functions:

- First—to work for speedy completion of the All-American highway.
- Second—to seek uniform traffic and customs regulations for international circulation of motor vehicles among the Americas.
- Third—to foster development of automobile clubs in those countries still not having them.
- Fourth—to provide a hemispheric network of service and protection for motorists.

State Policemen Warn Motorists To Be Careful

Roads Reported in "Bad Shape" following Heavy Fall of Snow

Dipping temperatures which brought rain in some sections and sleet in others put icy crusts on snow in the tri-state area where winter tightened its grip yesterday.

Cinder highways in this section proved a discouraging job yesterday in the Cumberland area as fresh snows fell, melted and froze on district roads last night.

State police reported roads in "bad shape," warned drivers to keep their equipment in good shape and to drive in a prudent manner.

Despite tough going, the Blue Ridge Transportation Company reported last night that all buses were running on time with the exception of two buses which were a few minutes late.

The snow storm which started Sunday reached a depth of six inches in mountainous Garrett county. It was estimated that five inches of snow fell in the Cumberland section.

The State Roads Commission had 500 men and 200 snow plows out to keep the highways open throughout the state and traffic was kept moving on the main thoroughfares.

Forecasts for today were as follows:

- Maryland—Cloudy, colder off the coast; Wednesday fair.
 - West Virginia—Cloudy with snow flurries in northwest portion; Wednesday fair; slightly warmer Tuesday night.
 - Western Pennsylvania—Cloudy with snow flurries in east portion; Wednesday generally fair; not much change in temperature.
- Temperature in Cumberland at 11:30 o'clock last night was thirty-one degrees.

Celanese Club To Hold Meeting

Benefit Organization Has Paid $2,000 in Benefits Since 1938

The Celanese Benefit Club will hold a special meeting Friday, January 31, at 7:30 o'clock in Textile Workers hall, 34 North Mechanic street.

The organization was formed in 1938 for the purpose of providing a system whereby Celanese workers might be assured of financial aid in time of sickness or injury without the "unpleasant procedure of taking a collection."

More than $2,000 has already been paid in benefits.

All men and women employed by Celanese are invited to attend the meeting regardless of whether they are members of the club or not.

Membership in the club is limited to men. However, a Ladies Division will be formed providing sufficient interest is shown, it was announced yesterday.

The Celanese Benefit Club is managed by a board of directors composed of those persons selected to represent the various groups and departments.

Boyd E. Payton, of Cresap park, is chairman of the board and Clarence P. Henry, Boone street, is treasurer.

Sorority Discusses Convention Plans; Ashley Is Speaker

W. Wallace Ashley, director of the Community Choir, spoke on "Early American Music" last evening at the regular meeting of the Delta Theta Chi sorority at the Central Y.M.C.A.

Plans for the annual convention of Merop Province, Delta Theta Chi sorority, scheduled for April 19 and 20 at the Emerson hotel, Baltimore, were discussed and it was indicated that approximately fifteen from here will attend. Mrs. Stanley Burke, of Cumberland, is president of Merop Province, which includes branches in North and South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia, District of Columbia and Maryland.
